SAS soldiers drop by rope from embassy roof

Post-mortem: rubble will tell more gory tales

Times News Services

LONDON — Police said today they believe explosives used by army commandos in storming the Iranian embassy set off other devices, possibly booby-traps, planted by terrorists who had killed two of their 21 hostages.

Police said they believe more than five Arab-Iranian gunmen were involved in the six-day siege, but stressed the proof lies in the rubble of the gutted building.

Peter Duffy, head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist branch said he believed at least six gunmen were involved in the embassy attack, and other police officials said five gunmen were slain and one was in custody.

"There are at least two bodies still in the embassy," Duffy said, "and I personally believe we may find more."

The black-hooded British army commandos staged their lightning raid Monday evening after the Arab-Iranian gunmen methodicaly executed two of their hostages, and threatened to kill more.

Three hostages were shot and wounded during the lifting of the siege. The other 16 — including four women — were released unharmed except for minor cuts.

Deputy Assistant Commissioner John Dellow said that soon into the six-day siege, the gunmen dropped demands for the release of 91 ethnic Arabs and wanted only "free exit from the country . . . by aircraft."

Part of the problem in identifying the dead, he explained, was that many of the hostages did not know one another. Besides embassy staff, there were journalists, tourists, a carpet dealer and a bank official among the captives.

Dellow declined to discuss details of the commando attack that ended the siege, but said:

"I would have thought that most of the loud noises and explosions were part of the military attack. With regard to the fire, I'm not so sure that was the case . . . It is likely, I think, that the amount of material left about by the terrorists was likely to be something that could start a fire."

Newspaper reports said highly sensitive microphones had been lowered down chimneys of the building to pinpoint the location of the hostages.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Tuesday praised "the brilliant action by the police and the Special Air Service (SAS)," the crack army regiment which stormed the embassy. She said they acted "with courage and confidence."

Meanwhile, the end of the siege brought praise in Tehran for the embassy staff and the British police.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr sent a message to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher thanking the British police for their "intelligent" handling of the siege, and Radio Tehran broadcast a statement in which the Iranian foreign ministry said "the manner and speed of action of the British police in these operations deserves admiration."

The battle ending the six-day standoff at the embassy — televised to millions — started when a black-masked

Did whiz kid crack code?

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI is seeking a possible "little Einstein" who may have used a classroom computer at one of New York City's most exclusive private schools to penetrate 21 Canadian computer systems.

"Some people here were outraged that it could happen," said a Dalton School teacher who asked not to be named. "But some find it sort of funny — I mean, what do you do to an 8th grader who's smart enough to figure out something like this?"

"At this point we don't know who we suspect or what the motive may have been," Federal Bureau of Investigation spokesman Quentin Ertel said Tuesday. "Our investigation is not complete by any means."

The FBI knows this much: Someone apparently found a way to tap into the link between two communications networks — GTE Telenet Communications Corp., of Vienna, Va., and Bell Canada's Datapac — and used it to gain access to computer systems operated by 21 Canadian firms and universities.

The FBI is still investigating why the computers were tapped, Ertel said. At least one company said many of its computer files were destroyed.

The FBI said New York Telephone Co. investigators traced the computer invader to several telephone numbers at the Dalton school.

"We don't know whether it was a little Einstein or a frustrated professor," one source told reporters.

Dalton is a private school located in Manhattan's exclusive Upper East Side. Helga Gould, an aide to the headmaster, said 1,224 students ranging from age 3 to 18 are enrolled. The school employs 180 teachers, administrators and clerks.

Four terminals are used in classes on computer technology.

Successfully tapping into the Datapac-Telenet link may require the address of the computer to be tapped, identification codes and, sometimes, passwords, said Telenet spokesman Carolyn Morse.

"It's hard to tell how sophisticated they were because we don't know yet what they did," she added.

Among the Canadian systems violated, according to the FBI affadavit, were Bell Canada, Scott Hart Associates, Cable Share Inc., and the universities of Toronto, Waterloo and Alberta.

World's worst airport?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver International Airport was branded Monday as one of the world's worst-run airports where passengers are subject to insults and humiliation and often left out in the rain by uncaring taxi drivers.

The criticism was levelled by a battery of witnesses testifying at an inquiry conducted by the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission under the chairmanship of Judge G. Ross Sutherland.

Specific allegations are that MacLure's Cabs Ltd., as a duly licensed passenger carrier, has failed to provide adequate and responsible taxi service to the public from the airport to points such as Richmond, Surrey and south Vancouver.

Several witnesses claimed they had been refused rides from the airport by MacLure's cab drivers, who were seeking longer, more lucrative runs to downtown Vancouver.

"As a Canadian, I am ashamed of the service at Vancouver International Airport," testified mining geologist Albert Thomas Lonergan of Vancouver. "Vancouver has the poorest (service) I've encountered and I blame management and bureaucratic stonewalling."

Lonergan said he came off an international flight from South Africa in 1977 and was refused a cab ride from a MacLure driver after being told where he wanted to go.

Anita Brown, a medical laboratory technician, testified she was the victim of a chaotic situation on New Year's Eve, 1979.

She said she was refused by three different MacLure's drivers when she informed them she was not going to downtown Vancouver.

Finally, she said, she found an RCMP constable in the airport and it was only when he intervened and put a halt to drivers selecting their own customers and leaving others that some order was restored.

Lawyer Paul Sabatino related an experience when he arrived on a night flight from Toronto on Dec. 2 last year and found an elderly Chinese woman reduced to tears because cab drivers would not pick her up. He said he did not get home until midnight and that he found the cab company had treated his complaint with indifference.

Robert Warren Taylor, chief licence inspector for the municipality of Richmond, told the inquiry: "This has got to be one of the most inefficient taxi services anywhere."

Elated Trident now planning 500-job future

By AL FORREST

Trident Aircraft Ltd. is back in business and the company expects to be twice as big as orginally planned.

Chief executive officer Jerry Vaverek today announced Trident will hire 500 employees by mid-1983, instead of its original target of about 250.

Research by the company during its waiting period has shown the demand for Trident products is much stronger than originally anticipated, he said.

Vaverek was commenting on an announcement Monday by Ed Lumley, federal minister of state for trade, that Ottawa will honor its promise of a $2 million loan plus $2 million in loan guarantees.

Lumley said: "This will allow the company to continue operations while it seeks additional funds from the private sector and carries out any changes in its operations which may be necessary for that purpose."

Trident hired 112 people in 1979 on the basis of a federal government announcement of the loan, but had to lay off 107 of them when the Liberal government fell and the Conservative government announced the loan had been cancelled.

Vaverek said he expects only 30 or 40 of the 107 employees will be hired back because the others have found other jobs and have moved away.

"We will find good people, I'm sure of that, but they will be new people."

The long-term plan is to produce 12 amphibian Trigull planes per month.

The original target was for a maximum of 10 per month.

When funds are received, the company will hire and train about 120 employees for the first 12-month period to produce the first plane for sale.

After that the pace will gradually increase until peak production of 12

Metchosin youth dies in crash

An 18-year-old Metchosin youth was killed Monday night in a two-car collision in the 3400-block Happy Valley Road.

Colwood RCMP said Calvin McKay Marshall died instantly in the crash about 7:30 p.m.

Marshall was a passenger in a car driven by Roger Raymond Praud, 18, of 595 Latoria.

A police spokesman said Praud was turning left into a parking lot beside Happy Valley store when his vehicle was in collision with a car driven by Stewart Rickie Gordon, 19, of 7155 Brentwood Drive.

The band blew it welcoming Ohira

OTTAWA (CP) — If Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira was offended, he didn't let on, but red-faced Canadian officials are still trying to figure out how the armed forces marching band committed such a gaffe.

Marching to Parliament Hill for ceremonies opening the prime minister's three-day visit to Canada, the band belted out The Colonel Bogey March — more familiar as the song whistled by British prisoners of war in the movie Bridge on the River Kwai.

External affairs made sure the band knew the Japanese national anthem, but no one checked the rest of the program.

"We are extremely embarrassed," an armed forces spokesman said.

"In the long, meticulous planning for this visit, this particular portion slipped by," he said.

Reservations on Seattle ferry

By JAKE BANKY

A spokesman in Transport Minister Alex Fraser's office confirmed today that a reservation system — similar to that offered by airlines — will also be used on the ferry service between Victoria and Seattle.

And just like air travel, passengers will pay for their reserved tickets in advance.

It was announced earlier that reservations would be required on the jetfoil.

Vancouver East NDP MLA Alex Macdonald claimed Monday that travellers will have to make the reservations a week in advance.

The spokesman said this will not be necessary during the spring and fall months.

But he agreed that during the peak summmer season it probably would be a good idea to reserve about a week in advance.

Macdonald claimed the arrangements call for seven days advance notice of reservations for either the jetfoil or the Victoria Princess and the reservations must be made through travel agencies.

"In fact those who will get the reservations are people on package tours," Macdonald said.

"It's good for the tour people and it's good for the travel agents but it's not very good for the people of Victoria or the tourists — the ordinary people who want to travel."

However the spokesman in Fraser's office said the system means travellers will be able to ensure they can get aboard when they want and will no longer have to line up hours in advance.

The spokesman said the new system will be a great improvement.

"Travellers will be able to decide which sailings they wish to travel on and be able to find out right there and then at the travel agent's office if in fact seating is available."

The spokesman said passengers do not have to reserve — they can take their chances and buy tickets at the dock as they have done in the past.

However, few tickets will be available if the system works as expected.

Secrecy shrouds tough embassy commandos

LONDON (CP) — The Special Air Services Regiment commandos who stormed the Iranian embassy in London Monday are the toughest and most covert soldiers in the British Army.

Even the number of SAS men, based in a heavily guarded camp in Hereford, 200 kilometres west of London, is never disclosed. Their insignia is a winged dagger. Their motto: "Who dares, wins."

Most are veterans of fighting guerrillas in Northern Ireland, Oman and Aden and of other little-publicized forays in the Middle East. Several have been decorated for bravery in action in these campaigns, including Sgt. Michael (Bronco) Lane, who lost several toes to frostbite climbing Mount Everest in 1976 and won the Military Medal for undercover work in Northern Ireland.

All SAS men are volunteers from British army units, primarily the Parachute Regiment. Their training is the most rigorous of any military unit and many have died during exercises.

The elite SAS is so shrouded in secrecy that the defence ministry and Scotland Yard refused to discuss details of the assault on the embassy.

Military sources said the SAS men lobbed in stun grenades similar to those they supplied to the West German GSG-9 anti-terrorist team that stormed a Lufthansa airliner hijacked to Somalia in October, 1977, to free 86 hostages. British sources in Washington said the commandos also used explosives in Monday's assault as a diversion to enter the embassy.

The stun grenades, developed by the SAS, apparently worked as well in the Iranian embassy as they did in Mogadishu, Somalia. They immobilized the terrorists for up to 10 seconds — enough time for the troopers to get in close and knock out the gunmen before they had time to kill their captives.

All four terrorists in the Mogadishu assault were killed. In the London siege, the SAS men killed three of the five Iranian Arab gunmen and wounded another.

SAS men also helped Dutch authorities plan the assault on a train and school near Assen three years ago in which Moluccan terrorists held scores of hostages.

Others helped Italian security authorities combat Red Brigades terrorists and in the manhunt for the killers of former Prime Minister Aldo Moro two years ago.

The biggest SAS operation in recent years has been a largely undercover campaign against Irish Republican Army terrorists in strife-torn Northern Ireland.

SAS men operate in four-man teams — a commander, an explosives expert, a radioman and a medic. They prowl the bomb-scarred streets of Belfast and the ambush-plagued country roads of the province hunting terrorists.

"The SAS shoot first and ask questions later," one army source said. "Some experts rate them far tougher than the Green Berets."

The SAS was formed in the Second World War by Col. David Stirling, a legendary hero who specialized in long-range penetration behind the German lines in North Africa. His men played havoc with Rommel.

commando — whose unit's motto is "who dares — wins" — slithered down a rope and tossed a concussion grenade through a closed window, touching off a smoky fire.

When 19 dazed and choking hostages emerged from the burning building, many leaning on police escorts who led them to waiting ambulances, it became clear a daring rescue operation had been a success.

Three of the terrorists were killed, another seriously wounded and a fifth captured unharmed.

Abbas Lavasani, 25, press attache at the embassy, was one of the hostages killed.

Police did not immediately identify the second dead hostage, whose body remained in the burned-out embassy today.

The siege began last Wednesday when the five terrorists stormed the embassy, demanding the release of 91 ethnic Arabs jailed in Iran's oil-rich Khuzestan province and autonomy for the region.

For six days, while Iran declared it would rather see the captives "martyred" than compromise, Scotland Yard negotiators patiently negotiated, cajoled and pleaded with the gunmen to stay calm.

But it was the cold-blooded murder of the hostage tossed out the door and the threat to kill another every 30 minutes followed by the sound of more gunfire that made the commando assault inevitable.

Until Monday afternoon, it appeared the tried and tested tactic of patience and constant talk would work. Five hostages had been released since the embassy was captured, three of them during the weekend.

But then police said they detected "a change in the mood of the gunmen," saying they showed signs of irritation and fatigue.

Matters got worse when three shots were heard from the embassy in the early afternoon.

With time clearly running out, authorities made two last-minute attempts to pacify the gunmen.

A Moslem mullah was brought to the police control center and talked to the gunmen by phone and Scotland Yard chief Sir David McNee sent a personal message in Arabic to the gunmen, urging them to be calm and patient.

At 7:25 p.m. London time, the SAS raid began.

It was an exercise in precision to rival any Hollywood script.

Ohira leaves early

Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira of Japan is cutting short his visit to Vancouver to fly to Yugoslavia to attend Thursday's funeral of Josip Tito.

Lost in the shuffle is a government luncheon with Premier Bill Bennett as host, scheduled for Wednesday.

Ohira is expected to leave from Vancouver International Airport on the first leg of his flight to Belgrade late tonight or early Wednesday. The original schedule would have allowed him a leisurely lunch and a round of golf before departing for Tokyo Wednesday afternoon.

A federal government dinner in honor of the Japanese leader will be held on schedule in Vancouver tonight. The legislature is adjourning one hour earlier than usual to permit members to attend.

Bennett and Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau were expected to meet Ohira separately during the day.

Trudeau and Bennett had their own private meeting at the Hotel Vancouver this morning.

The legislature Monday voted unanimously to approve a resolution welcoming Ohira.

Interest rates dip again

MONTREAL (CP) — Three of Canada's chartered banks have cut residential mortgage rates in the wake of a continued decline in the prime interest rate.

The Royal Bank announced today it is cutting its three basic mortgage rates immediately and will peg all three at a common new rate of 15.5 per cent.

The five-year rate drops by 1.25 per cent, the three-year term drops by one per cent and the one-year term by half a point.

At the same time, the bank is lowering the interest rate paid on RoyMor investment certificates by between a half and a full percentage point.

The Bank of Montreal said Monday its mortgage rates are dropping by up to three-quarters of a point, effective today.

One-year open mortgages decline to 15.5 per cent from 16 per cent, while one-year, two-year and three-year closed mortgages drop to 15 per cent from 15.75 per cent, and five-year closed mortgages fall to 15.25 per cent from 16 per cent.

The Mercantile Bank of Canada also announced a series of reductions on residential mortgage rates, effective immediately.

The bank's NHA and conventional five-year open mortgage rates have been lowered to 15.25 per cent from 17 per cent, its three-year open rates to 15 per cent from 16.25 per cent, and its one-year closed rates to 15 per cent from 16.25 per cent.

Permanent Olympic site considered for Greece

By KENNETH REICH
Los Angeles Times

The Greek government has released a draft agreement foreseeing creation of an Olympic "state" near the Peloponnesus, site of the ancient games, for the permanent staging of the Olympics.

Officials said the state, near Olympia, would be politically neutral, militarily inviolable and under the jurisdiction and management of the International Olympic Committee. Greece would retain sovereign rights. The IOC would be expected to finance the building and maintenance of facilities, which would revert to Greece at no cost should the Olympics later be withdrawn from the site.

Louis Guirandou-N'diaye of the Ivory Coast, a member of the IOC executive board sent to Greece by Lord Killanin, the International Olympic Committee president, was quoted as saying he found the Greek plans "perfectly feasible."

Guirandou-N'Diaye heads a committee that will report on the prospects for permanently locating the summer games in Greece at next year's World Olympic Congress in Baden-Baden, West Germany. Killanin has said it is unlikely that a permanent site in Greece could become operational until 1992.

Greek officials said that the committee was assured that it could undertake the construction of permanent facilities free of tax burdens, with all Greek public utilities at its disposal. As long as the Olympics were staged at the site, the IOC would be the sole owner of all the facilities and administer them as it saw fit.

Greece would provide security around the site.

Gov't nursing issue boils; others accept

By MIKE HUGHES

Registered nurses at 113 B.C. hospitals have voted to accept a 27-month contract but another dispute involving 2,700 provincial government nurses is heating up again.

The 12,500 members of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. voted Monday on a contract which would grant them a 44-per-cent salary increase over the term of the agreement.

The association would not say what the approval margin was.

Voting by the hospitals is expected to be completed by the end of the week.

Meanwhile, Mike Davison, chairman of the Government Employee Relations Bureau (GERB), today accused negotiators for provincial government nurses of deliberately misinterpreting the recommendations of an industrial inquiry commission.

Commissioner Justice Henry Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court proposed a salary increase of 25 per cent over two years.

The principle adopted by Hutcheon was that because the government nurses work a shorter work week he would grant them hourly wage parity with the general nurses but not the equivalent monthly rate.

The nurses' negotiators are recommending rejection of Hutcheon's report by the nurses, members of the RNABC and Registered Psychiatric Nurses Association of B.C.

The vote will be held next Monday.

The nurses' spokesmen say that although Hutcheon adopts the principle of giving government nurses roughly the same settlement as the general nurses, there are sections of his report that don't follow that principle.

They cite salary and vacation benefits as major problem areas.

Davison said he is furious with the nurses' negotiators because they are trying in comments to the media to convey the message that Hutcheon recommended an over-all equivalent wage settlement.

He didn't, Davison said. He has called for hourly parity and it is up to the nurses to decide whether or not they accept that principle.

The nurses say Davison has refused to meet with them to discuss the Hutcheon report but Davison said he was never asked directly for a meeting.

Sellers suffers attack

DUBLIN (AP) — British actor Peter Sellers suffered a "slight" heart attack Monday night but was recovering today at St. Vincent's Hospital here, a hospital spokesman reported.

In the Irish capital with his wife, Lynn Frederick, to make a $2-million series of television commercials for a British bank, Sellers was taken to the hospital shortly before midnight after dinner at his hotel.

A spokesman at St. Vincent's said the 54-year-old comedy star had "a relatively slight heart attack and is quite comfortable now. He is now being kept for observation." He was in the hospital cardiac unit.

Sellers has a history of heart problems. He had a major heart attack in 1964 and had a pacemaker fitted after a collapse in 1977.

Macdonald's criticism of the reservation system came as he continued the NDP attack in the legislature on Premier Bill Bennett over what it called the secretive arrangement that led to establishment of the jetfoil service.

He charged Bennett actually broke the law when he made a commitment of $600,000 in B.C. Development Corp. funds to the Flying Princess Transportation Co. which will operate the leased jetfoil.

BCDC directors, by law, may approve only secured loans.

But Flying Princess Transportation has not been incorporated.

Bennett has consistently refused to provide details of his March 13 meeting with members of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

According to Macdonald, what happened was:

"They were in desperate straits because of the mishandling of the Princess Marguerite. So Bennett convened the meeting, called in his friends and gave them the commitment that the development corporation would accommodate them with a $600,000 loan and no problem about losses."

Trudeau the only voice for the rest of Canada

OTTAWA — When Japan's Prime Minister Ohira finished his address to the Canadian Parliament on Monday, Senate Speaker Jean Marchand stood at the podium to read off the usual speech of thanks.

Little Jean Marchand cut a fine figure in morning pants with his sweeping grey hair and horn-rimmed glasses and an observer had to remind himself that this used to be the fiery bantamweight union leader in Quebec who was involved in all the celebrated dustups on that province's labor scene before being persuaded to come to Ottawa with Pierre Trudeau.

Now, in 1980, Marchand stood just several feet away from Trudeau on the carpet of the chamber and just behind him stood Commons Speaker Jeanne Sauve, another Trudeau appointment from his home province.

Lacking in stature.

The juxtaposition of the three served as a reminder of just how the party of Pierre Trudeau is now so lacking in any real stature from the English-speaking portion of the population.

After being in power for all but a few months of the past 12 years, Trudeau heads a Liberal party that cannot find anyone to speak for Anglophone Canada and grasp the attention of Quebec just before the referendum vote.

With the exception of Finance's Allan MacEachen, the brooding Cape Breton loner who rarely gets involved in matters outside the Commons, Anglophones do not have the clout nor the talent to claim any of the major portfolios in this government.

The vital energy portfolio is owned by Marc Lalonde. The massive and important Transport post is run by Jean-Luc Pepin. Justice is under the direction of Jean Chretien. Health and welfare, with the biggest budget of all, is the domain of Monique Begin. Privy Council president and House leader is the bight and polished Yvon Pinard.

Probably the most new "Anglophone" minister in the cabinet is Treasury Board President Donald Johnston, who can't really qualify as a spokesman for the Anglophone majority in Canada because he comes from Montreal.

Mighty Ontario, owner of most of the corporate and financial muscle in the country, the province with the highest population, the province with the most seats in the Commons, hasn't a single minister who is a dominant figure.

The minister who does have the portfolio that should command respect, external affairs, is Mark MacGuigan, who is completely overshadowed by Trudeau's end-of-career renewed interest in that field.

Those Ontario ministers who have the seniority — Eugene Whelan, Herb Gray, John Munro, John Robarts — are not taken seriously by the public.

Lordly Toronto, master of all it surveys, hasn't a single person around the cabinet table who can raise his voice above a squeak. Of the four ministers in this Trudeau cabinet, all have minor portfolios and three of them are rookies, meant to be seen and not heard.

The result of all this (the most overlooked facet of Pierre Trudeau's political career), is that two weeks before the referendum vote there is an embarrassing scramble to find someone representing the majority of Canadians who can go into Quebec and draw anything but sniggers.

Premier Lougheed made a late offer to Claude Ryan that, one notes, has not been picked up.

Premier Bill Davis of laggardly Ontario, who has sadly dissipated the bridge-of-Confederation role bequeathed him by John Robarts and stubbornly refuses to give in on a mean little debate with the French-speaking portion of his province, went to Montreal last week for a speech in which his token few paragraphs of French were so ill-prepared as to be insulting and the commentators are still making rude remarks.

Bennett's turn next

Next week, Bill Bennett of British Columbia will attempt the same foray, too little too late.

What has happened is that Ottawa over the past 12 years has slowly been denuded of any forthright, respected spokesman who can speak for this party in power on behalf of the nine provinces that are not Quebec.

Pierre Trudeau is the lone knight in the lists.

He has no lieutenants where he now most needs them.

There has to be a lesson there somewhere.

Alert Bay evidence queried

VANCOUVER (CP) — Evidence accepted by a federal commission on Indian health would not stand up at a quasi-judicial hearing into the competence of a doctor, says the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons.

That is why the college is taking no immediate action in the case of Dr. Jack Pickup of Alert Bay and is still asking for full documentation that he has been drunk on duty, a spokesman said.

In his report on health care at Alert Bay, federal commissioner Dr. Gary Goldthorpe said Pickup has "been obviously drunk while performing as a doctor" and went on to criticize the college for not acting on his case earlier.

Commenting on the report, college registrar Dr. John Hutchison asked what grounds Goldthorpe had for finding Pickup had been drunk and said they should be substantiated.

In a telephone interview from his Ontario home Sunday, Goldthorpe said "there is ample evidence of Dr. Pickup being inebriated on duty.

"There is a lot of support for Dr. Pickup and a lot of these people want him to remain as a doctor. But none of these people even denied that he was drunk in public. I don't think there is any doubt."

Some of the evidence given Goldthorpe was in the form of letters and affidavits by Pickup's patients and hospital staff alleging he was drunk on duty.

But college spokesman Dr. Craig Arnold said the college needs more concrete evidence than the opinion of individual witnesses at specific occasions.

He said other doctors sent to Alert Bay on temporary duty in the past two years had told the college they had seen no evidence of Pickup being drunk on duty.

"We cannot just say, 'someone says he was drunk' and so charge him with unethical behavior," he said.

He said such a charge would be heard at a quasi-judicial inquiry with lawyers representing both sides and concrete evidence is needed before such a charge could stand up.

"So far, we do not have that evidence," he said.

Arnold said the college would require documented, confirmed and up-to-date evidence before taking action.

Funding accord on centre

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal and provincial governments will join the city today in signing the long-awaited agreement to build a $51.2 million convention centre, Mayor Jack Volrich said Monday.

The federal government, which is contributing $17 million, had been holding out for a clause saying that the city and province had sole responsibility for any overruns, but now has agreed, Volrich said.

The mayor also expects Ottawa will put up $20 million to $30 million for the $60 million people-mover transportation system he is proposing for downtown Vancouver.

Boat victims identified

CAMPBELL RIVER, (CP) — RCMP have identified two men who drowned near here Friday as Steven Alliston of Comox and Larry Zloty, 27, of Cultus Lake.

The pair were flipped into the water when their 3.5-metre boat overturned on Upper Campbell Lake. Two companions clung to the boat until they were rescued.

Fires destroy 5,000 acres

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Two major fires in the Prince George region cover about 5,000 acres, forest ministry officials said Monday.

The Fishy fire, about 65 kilometres southwest of Chetwynd, has burned about 2,000 acres (809 hectares) and, at one time, a Westcoast Transmission pipeline pumping station was threatened before the fire changed direction.

At the Zut fire, about Mile 200 on the Alaska Highway, another 3,000 acres (1,214 hectacres) have burned and are not contained.

Appeal quashed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The appeal of a man convicted of killing four teenagers near Rosedale, B.C., July 18, 1977, and throwing their bodies into the Fraser River was dismissed Monday by the B.C. Court of Appeal.

Walter Murray Madsen was sentenced to four concurrent life terms. He was convicted of first-degree murder and Gould ruled he must serve at least 25 years before he becomes eligible for parole.

Plane crash fatal

REVELSTOKE (CP) — Hans Richter, 30, of Surrey, was killed Sunday in a light plane crash about 80 kilometres north of here, RCMP said Monday. Three Revelstoke men survived. Pilot Larry Capanero, 34, and his cousin, Charles Gordon Capanero, 48, were in satisfactory condition in hospital here. Herbert Speidel, 24, was transferred to Kamloops hospital.

Illegal protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. Labor Relations Board panel ruled Monday that recent work disruptions at the liquor distribution branch's main warehouse to protest work being done by a non-union contractor were in violation of the B.C. Labor Code. The strife came after a non-union contractor was hired to do electrical work in the warehouse.

Chemical controls

SURREY (CP) — An accidental spill of polychlorinated biphenyls at a B.C. Hydro electric shop here last month has prompted municipal council to take measures to control the transport and storage of the chemical.

Although the spill was cleaned up to the satisfaction of the environmental protection service, council voted Monday night to ask B.C. Hydro officials how they plan to dispose of PCBs.

2,4-D gets green light in Okanagan

VERNON (CP) — The provincial water investigation branch has been given a green light by the pesticide control appeals board to proceed with applications, with minor modifications, of the herbicide 2,4-D to control Eurasian milfoil in Okanagan Valley lakes.

The branch said it is setting up alternate water supplies at the south end of Wood Lake in preparation for the use of 2,4-D.

Honey Recipe of the Month

May: REFRESHING HONEY DESSERT

1 package lemon or orange flavored gelatin
½ cup boiling water
½ cup honey
Juice of ½ lemon
1 small can evaporated milk
½ pound vanilla wafers or graham crackers

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add honey and lemon juice and mix well. Fold in the evaporated milk that has been chilled and whipped. Pour this mixture into a pan that has been lined with crushed vanilla wafers or graham crackers. Place crushed vanilla wafers on top of mixture and put in refrigerator to set. Cut into squares. Serves 6.

To make crumbs — put wafers or graham crackers in a paper bag. Crush with rolling pin.

Oil madness

If the consumers of Canada could raise their energy consciousness level above gas station billboards which broadcast how much (how little) is being charged for fuel, oil pricing madness in this country might come to an abrupt halt.

The national electorate turfed the Conservative Party out of office for its intention to raise the price of gasoline about 32 cents a gallon this year — an 18-cent-a-gallon increase in the excise tax, plus about 14 cents from increases at the wellhead.

Now the Tories have been replaced by a party which promises to raise pump prices by half as much but threatens to glean an extra billion dollars or two from the oil companies.

Consumers are no doubt happier with the Liberal scheme, but they can laugh only as long as the blinders are in place.

The prevailing wisdom on the streets and the floor of the House of Commons is that consumers, because they are also taxpayers, are paying the full cost of oil. It's only a matter of bookkeeping. The anticipated $4 billion needed to cover Canada's imported oil subsidy this year is really paid for by consumers through their taxes rather than at the pump.

In fact, many argue it's a better deal for the consumer because the deficit is spread over a much larger tax base.

Because this country has the chance of becoming energy self-sufficient, however, the argument fails.

Instead of being in the position where consumer and/or taxpayer dollars can be reinvested in Canadian energy developments, we spend $4 billion with foreign producers. That is $4 billion worth of Canadian ingenuity and production that ends up in he coffers of Saudi Arabia and others. It doesn't make any sense, and the folly is magnified by the fact the government will go deeper into debt to subsidize its constituents.

Moreover, there's no incentive for conservation. Canadian's use of petroleum products increased seven per cent last year.

We import more than 400,000 barrels of light crude oil a day, yet we export between 90,000 to 130,000 barrels of heavy crude a day because it is not economic to refine it.

We export the equivalent of 50,000 barrels of oil a day in propane. Why not? What incentive is there for Canadians to use the stuff?

Western Canada has huge reserves of natural gas, yet there is no pipeline to Atlantic Canada where home, industry and even some electrical production rely on imported oil.

And then there is the latest joke to be played on Canadians. Because our fuel is so cheap, the world's major airlines have figured out where to top up their tanks, whether the jets need it or not. It is estimated that these companies will save $400 million this year thanks to the generosity of the Canadian taxpayers.

If the situation wasn't so preposterous, it would indeed be funny.

Powerless observation

The power of panic is awesome, even when it comes to matters of observation.

Recently a Brink's Canada Ltd. guard was murdered and another was wounded in an armed robbery outside a Toronto bank. Numerous people were standing by as the robbers fired at the two guards before escaping in a car with $178,000.

Police forces have always advised people that if they are unlucky enough to witness a crime in progress, they should make a clear mental note of relevant details that may help with identification and capture of crooks. In one bank hold-up, for instance, the teller who was handed the note and faced a revolver later could remember only that there was a missing button on the robbers sweater. Hair color, height, and other more permanent features were not noted.

Making a conscious effort to register eye color while staring down the end of a gun might be something beyond most of us. It is to be hoped we are never put to the test.

As the Toronto robbery last week demonstrates, however, witnesses do not need to be in the line of fire to become confused.

Police said that some witnesses reported seeing a machine-gun, while others reported a revolver. The witnesses also differed on whether the robbers were wearing masks. The exact number of persons who attacked the guards is also a mystery. The getaway car either had a vinyl or convertible roof.

The authorities can use every edge we can give them in capturing criminals. Register relevant facts, then panic.

Was Cy Vance deceived?

NEW YORK — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance may have been deliberately shunted aside by the Carter administration as it prepared, without his knowledge, for the military mission to rescue the hostages in Iran. And that probably was crucial to Vance's inability to stop the mission, once he learned of it.

Those possibilities can be seen in the following sequence of events, confirmed by officials well-informed about the episode:

On the evening of Thursday, April 10, Vance left for a much-needed vacation in Florida. He had some reason for satisfaction as he departed, because he had staged "a major show of force" in persuading President Carter, on the previous weekend, not to include an embargo on medicine and food in the sanctions against Iran announced April 7.

Out of town

But on April 11, the National Security Council met, with Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher in Vance's seat, and decided with the president's approval to undertake the rescue mission. That such a momentous matter was scheduled for one day after the secretary's long-planned departure seems significant in itself.

Even more so is the fact that Christopher, who is personally close to Vance, was led to believe that the secretary already knew that the president had decided to undertake the mission. For that reason, and knowing how much Vance needed to rest and relax, Christopher did not call to discuss the rescue effort with him. Neither did anyone else in the administration.

Thus, for most of four days, until Vance returned to his office after lunch on Monday, April 14, the secretary of state was not informed even by his closest associate that Carter had decided on military action within Iran. Just how Christopher was "led to believe" — the deliberate phrase of a knowledgeable source — that Vance already knew that the mission would go, and whether it was done accidentally or with intent to deceive, cannot be certainly stated.

But the damage, from Vance's point of view, was done. For the rest of April 14, he is reported to have "stewed" over what had been done in his absence and to have been appalled by what he feared would be the consequences of the mission. On the morning of April 15, he took his objections to the plan directly to Carter.

Vance feared that even if the mission succeeded, the infuriated Iranians would quickly seize other hostages from among the 300 or so Americans in Iran; and that whatever its outcome, it would complicate relations with other Islamic states and open new opportunities for the Soviet Union in the Persian Gulf. The president rejected this argument but convened, the same day, a meeting of the National Security Council at which Vance again outlined his objections.

When he finished, he was greeted by "deafening silence" — which will surprise no one even slightly acquainted with bureaucracy and the jockeying for favor and position around presidents. Carter had already decided in favor of the mission; for anyone at that point to have supported Vance would have been for that person to oppose the president directly.

That seldom happens; and it didn't on April 15. But who knows what might have been the outcome had Vance been able to argue against the plan on April 11, before the final decision, or even if he had been promptly informed so that he could have acted immediately? Vance himself told James Reston of The New York Times that after the NSC meeting, when it was too late, some of its participants conceded privately that he had raised serious questions.

During the rest of that week, Vance, who was deeply disturbed, presented his objections to the president three more times, to no avail. On one occasion, Carter asked him to meet with a delegation that had come to protest the administration's more militant stand against Iran; Vance declined, knowing the rescue mission was on tap.

Sometime that week he told Carter that he could stay on as secretary of state only if he publicly stated his dissent from the venture into Iran.

"That would be hard for me to swallow," the president said; but he reluctantly agreed.

Decision to resign

Over the weekend of April 19-20, however, Vance — suffering from an attack of gout — decided that it would be wrong for the administration's foreign policy spokesman to take such a dissenting position; and on Monday, April 21, he sent Carter a note to say that he would resign instead.

The president asked him to reconsider, and Vance could take no public action anyway, lest he endanger the security of the military mission. Its failure — announced early Friday, April 25 — made the secretary's position more difficult, since to resign at such a time would appear to some as abandoning ship. But Vance's mind was made up; on Sunday, April 27, he reaffirmed to Carter that he would leave.

Did he believe he had been deceived? If so, no-one who knows Cyrus Vance expects him ever to say so.

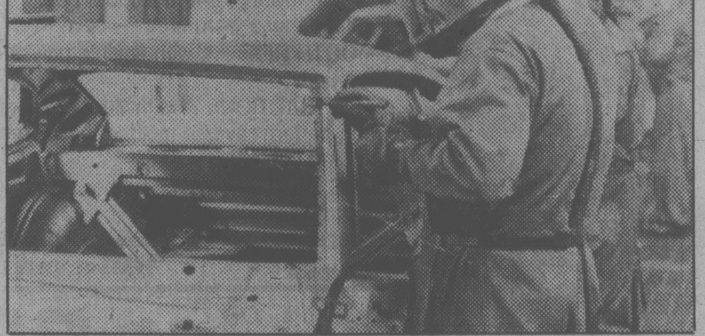
Grant better spent on UIC

OTTAWA — Two truly scary news stories about Chrysler Canada, and so about the 9,000 jobs at stake there, have been printed recently, one in the business pages of the newspapers and the other in a magazine.

Neither story concerned Chrysler directly, but between them the two said just about everything that needs to be said about the auto company, and about its present pitiful condition.

The first story was brief, and was datelined at Taipei, Taiwan. It reported that the Taiwan Machinery Manufacturing Corp. and General Motors Corp. have signed an agreement to build jointly a $100-million plant to produce heavy trucks, buses, tractors and heavy engines. The plant, it doesn't need to be said, will be located in Taiwan.



North American auto workers being replaced by Third World labor.

Cheap labor

The second story is embedded in a long article, the last of a three-part series published by The New Yorker and written by Richard Barnet. The article describes the phenomenon of the development of a new form of "global economy" within which multinationals move assembly plants from one Third World country to another in search of the best labor deals — in Colombia, unskilled workers available at up to 24 cents an hour (including fringe benefits), in South Korea a 60-hour work week, in Malaysia rural women with dexterous hands, perfect eyesight and docile compositions so they can handle microcomputer circuitry, in Singapore where publishing employees have a productivity output seven times that of American workers.

And on and on and on. It's pretty obvious why General Motors is setting up shop in Taiwan.

Only one way exists for home-grown automakers to compete — to manufacture the so-called "world car," of which bits and pieces would be made everywhere with the actual models assembled in Detroit, or in Windsor, and then sold both in North America and abroad, in South America, Asia, Africa.

General Motors commands the economies of scale (60-plus per cent of the U.S. domestic market), and the access to capital, to be able to bring this off. Along the way to "consolidating the car business into a giant export machine," Barnet reports that GM now is prepared to do what it always has held back from doing for fear of anti-trust action — to drive Chrysler into the ground.

The reality is chilling. Compared with it, Industry Minister Herb Gray's attempt to insist that Chrysler commit itself to job guarantees before he signs over a $200-million loan guarantee, is pure fantasy.

The most that Ottawa might be able to accomplish by this handout, and Washington by its dollop of $1.5 billion, is to keep Chrysler tottering along for another couple of years. The company lacks the resources — it got into the small-car game too late — to build a "world car" to compete with Datsuns and Toyotas and Rabbits and Fiats. Neither can it compete in the traditional way now that identical cars, or car parts, can be made in Colombia or Taipei, by workers who earn less than $1 an hour, for 60 hours a week, and who don't go on strike.

So what the hell do we do? Is $200 million worth of wage subsidies paid out indirectly through the company worse than the same amount, pretty much, paid out in unemployment insurance payments?

Yes, it is, surely, if part of the $200 million gets "lost" in executive salaries and plant investment, and perhaps some shareholders' dividends, and then accomplishes nothing more than a two-year stay of execution, after which the unemployment insurance payments begin anyway.

About three years ago, the phrase "de-industrialization" floated into our vocabulary, and then sort of floated out again while we went through two federal elections, worried about national unity, and worried about such things as the possibility we might actually have to pay another 18 cents on a gallon of gasoline.

During that time, the country's 11 First Ministers, and as well business and labor leaders, got together every now and then to talk at each other in a cloud of generalities about what a nice thing it might be to have, one day, some time, an industrial strategy.

No definition

Today, as we watch Chrysler's frantic struggle for life, we are discovering what "de-industrialization" really means. But we are no closer than before — indeed no closer than in 1971 when the phrase was coined — to discovering what an industrial strategy means.

It means a lot of pain, a lot of hard decisions, a lot of wrenching changes. Mostly it means, for our industrial heartland of Ontario and Quebec, survival of irrevocable and quickening decline. In terms of Canada's future, the importance of an industrial strategy is to Quebec referendum on which so much ink is being expended these days roughly, as is one year's salary by the president of Chrysler to one day's wages by a Taiwanese assembly-line worker.

Wright replies

Peter Pollen, the master of the verbal switchblade has struck again, cutting deeply and putting my integrity as planning chairman of the City of Victoria in question (letter, Planning Problems, April 18 Times).

He suggests, because of my business holdings, I have a conflict of interest. This philosophy, taken to the ultimate, suggests people with no commercial involvement in Victoria are the only ones worthy of handling this portfolio. What rubbish! Pollen while mayor, had extensive land holdings in Victoria and yet he felt capable of handling the mayor's job — a much more influential position than that of planning chairman.

His claim to fame is that when he became mayor of Victoria, there was a hole in the ground called the Reid site, and when he left Victoria, there was still a hole in the ground called the Reid site. I can appreciate Mr. Pollen's frustration at having been rejected by the members of three political parties. He now seems to be suffering from political senility. It is a matter of great sorrow to me that a man with so much potential is consumed with disappointment and criticism of others who still serve.

His verbal diatribe that the harbor is being walled off and turned into a commercial strip, is ludicrous. The proposed density of the conference centre is less than one-quarter of the density allowed; which incidentally was passed by council during Pollen's reign.

During the time I have had the privilege of serving as Victoria planning chairman, our planning projects have included: residential heritage program; the Chinatown plan; the preservation of upper Fort Street; commercial heritage program; Harris Green; Songhees development plan; Inner Harbor walkways; preservation of our neighborhoods through rezoning; and the development permit program.

In political life there are doers and there are knockers; there is no question where I stand.

Just for the record, I disqualified myself on the Inner Harbor rezoning because of the possible benefit the rezoning may have had on B.C. Steamships, a public service company of which I am the managing director.

The record will show I have consistently abstained from any vote on Victoria City Council which might have had the slightest possibility of conflict of interest. — Robert H. Wright, Victoria Alderman.

Survival tips

On March 2, my girlfriend and I went skiing to Mount Arrowsmith just outside of Port Alberni. The weather was mild when we approached the ski area and it looked as though the weather would be ideal.

When we purchased our lift tickets we were unable to view an area ski map because the upper ski lodge at Arrowsmith had burned down two weeks earlier. In the fire the area ski map was destroyed. We decided to rely on the run markings during our day skiing.

As it turned out the area runs signs were obliterated by the wet heavy snow conditions.

On our third run we skied into an area that was strewn with cliffs, trees and unstable snow.

My girlfriend was able to hike back to the start of the run but I was farther down in an area that did not allow me to do so. The snow was breaking up into slides and hiking back was very hazardous. I decided to hike out to the highway.

Fortunately my girlfriend made it safely back to the ski area and eventually notified the ski patrol.

I ended up hiking down the mountain from around noon until 6 p.m. when further passage was unsafe because of lack of light. Heavy fog rolled in as well.

I spent the night resting on a pile of twigs and when it began to become light I hiked out to the highway where I met two members of the Alberni Valley Search and Rescue.

The purpose of this letter is first to thank the Arrowsmith Ski Patrol, the Alberni Search and Rescue and the Port Alberni RCMP for all their help in looking for me and also keeping my family informed.

The second purpose of this letter is to warn other skiers of the possible danger of the same thing happening to them. I learned some valuable lessons in case I'm involved in a similar situation again.

(1) If you become wet before resting for the night or stopping hiking, wring out your clothing as well as possible to prevent hypothermia.

(2) Wear a hat to prevent heat loss from the head area.

(3) If possible pack a survival kit consisting of a Bic lighter, a survival blanket (they are about the size of a pack of cigarettes), a small map of the area, a compass, some dried fruit or nuts and raisins, a small flashlight and a whistle.

All the items are very inexpensive, take up very little room and could someday save your life. — David S. H. Nicholson, 875 Bank Street.

Haiti's still an island of despair

By LEONARD GREENWOOD
The Los Angeles Times

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — What used to be a lush Caribbean country has been stripped of its foliage. The Haitians are literally burning their future. Forests have been felled for charcoal, and now even that is nothing but spindly black sticks.

The hills around Gonaives are bare of all but thornbushes, the topsoil long ago carried away by erosion that foliage once held in check. And thornbushes make poor charcoal.

All over Haiti, once known as the "Pearl of the Antilles," destruction of the land is going on at an ever-accelerating pace.

Before the slave uprising that freed this land from its French masters in 1804, Haiti accounted for 40 per cent of France's foreign trade. A small country the size of Maryland, it had great plantations that produced sugar cane and a wealth of fruits.

Today the plantations are gone, broken up by successive generations into plots of diminishing size until today the average farm consists of just two acres and supports four or five people.

The ruins of the plantation houses are surrounded by rocky, worn-out holdings where listless peasants struggle to raise enough food to keep their hungry children alive.

There is less land under irrigation now than there was two centuries ago. And the last of the forests are being devoured.

Only 10 years ago, 12 per cent of Haiti was still covered by trees. Since then, a third of those trees have been destroyed, the wood used for fuel and the land, suitable or not, planted in crops in a desperate attempt to relieve the pressure caused by growing numbers of starving people.

Charcoal provides 85 per cent of Haiti's energy needs, and while the trees last hundreds of thousands of peasants will augment their meager incomes by making charcoal.

"As the population has boomed, people have moved farther and farther up the hillsides, cutting the forests and denuding the land," Al Furman, director of the U.S. aid program here, told a recent visitor.

"The result is widespread erosion. Erosion is literally washing away the agricultural base in Haiti."

The state of the land is a symbol of what has happened to Haiti politically and economically in the last 175 years. Generations of tyrants have exploited the country and its people, repressing them and robbing them.

Haiti, whose people remember with pride that their country was the second nation in the Western Hemisphere to win independence by fighting for it, today finds itself in the humiliating position of being the poorest country in the hemisphere and one of the poorest on earth.

Since independence, the population has increased ten-fold. In this century there has been a steady decline in rural living standards and today nearly four out of five rural Haitians live below the poverty line.

A recent report by the U.S. Agency for International Development says the main cause of Haiti's poverty is low agricultural production.

"Haitian agriculture is increasingly unable to feed its growing population and the government has been forced to import more and more food to prevent widespread suffering," the report says.

Haiti has almost no natural resources. There is a bauxite mine near Port-au-Prince, the capital, but it is close to being mined out.

"Even the sea has been fished out," an observer said.

The country is regularly beset by drought, floods and hurricanes. As drought followed last year's Hurricane David, the peasants of the worst afflicted areas migrated to Port-au-Prince and other towns.

Those who could scrape together the money joined the "boat people" in what has become Haiti's most famous export — human beings.

Immigration is an old safety valve for Haiti, a way out during economic disasters or political repression. For generations Haitians have left in waves. There are probably 100,000 Haitians in Cuba, thousands more in the Dominican Republic, which shares the island of Hispanola with Haiti. And there are large and growing exile colonies in Miami, New York, Mexico, Paris, Montreal, the Bahamas and Caracas, Venezuela.

Great numbers left during the 15 years of dictatorship under the tyrant Francois (Papa Doc) Duvalier, who brought death, torture, repression, voodoo terror and economic stagnation to Haiti.

Some experts calculate that during his reign 40,000 people disappeared. When Duvalier died in 1972 almost nothing had been done for the country for 15 years.

A black man, he had broken up the old administration of mulattoes, eliminating from government service the people who had run the country for generations. Even the few roads, built by U.S. Marines who occupied Haiti from 1915 to 1934, were falling apart.

During the worst years of Duvalier's regime, Western nations that had been providing financial and technical aid withdrew. After his death, they returned.

Today $75 million a year is being poured into Haiti in aid from all over the world.

Together the aid-giving countries have formed a commission with the Haitian government to administer the development programs but, according to foreign experts who take part, the donor nations have had to make it clear regularly that Haiti must make a stronger commitment to development if the aid programs are to be continued and expanded.

Francois 'Papa Doc' Duvalier, a reign of terror

Today Haiti is run by Jean Claude Duvalier, 28, the son of Francois Duvalier. Known as Baby Doc, young Duvalier was proclaimed president for life the day after his father died.

"For a time after Jean Claude took power things improved, but there has been a deterioration since last year," said Gregoire Eugene, leader of the Social Christian Party. "There has been a very tense mood since August, when opposition leader Sylvio Claude was arrested. People who were powerful under Papa Doc are coming back into office."

Eugene admits that the opposition parties have few members, but, he says, they include most of the country's intellectuals and teachers.

Last November, Gerard Gourges, head of Haiti's Human Rights Commission, scheduled a lecture on human rights. It drew an enormous crowd and 60 thugs armed with batons moved in to break it up. Gourges and his wife were among those who were beaten. Haiti apologized to four countries, including the United States, whose diplomats were beaten up.

Many people believe that the thugs acted with government approval.

"It was like an action of the Gestapo," Gourges said.

"Generally, the government did not repeat the brutality of the Papa Doc years, but it has not institutionalized changes that will provide any guarantee that those days cannot come back," a foreign diplomat said.

"Haiti still has a president for life. It still has a rubber-stamp legislature. And when the legislature adjourns each year from September to April constitutional guarantees are suspended and complete power is left officially in the hands of the president."

Although Haiti has a long way to go before it looks evenly remotely democratic, the improvements have brought private investment back to Haiti. In the last five or six years labor-intensive light industries have created 40,000 new jobs, mainly in Port-au-Prince. They turn out a wide range of goods, from 98 per cent of the world's baseballs to electrical components.

It is only a drop in the bucket in terms of the number of jobs needed in Haiti, where roughly 250,000 youngsters come into the work force every year.

Everything's so nice in the good old '80s

russell baker

President Carter is nice. Ronald Reagan is nice, too, but in a different way. You know: President Carter is really nice — nice family man, nice smile, nice to people, nice church man; but Ronald Reagan has such a nice sense of humor, and nice grin, and a nice way of presenting himself.

You just can't help thinking Reagan is so nice all round that it would be nice to be with him, but of course it would be nice to be with Carter, too, only in a different way.

I was thinking about this yesterday morning while shaving. It was nice to shave. Not terrific, mind you — don't get me wrong — but, still — nice.

I guess what got me thinking along these lines was the day. It was a nice day. Not one of the great days, to be sure, but not really rotten either. It was the kind of day when it doesn't really rain, but the sun doesn't really make much show either, the kind of day when you feel stiff all over and 10 years older than you really are, but not like you might have to go into the hospital right away. In short, a nice day.

Downstairs for breakfast the usual question arose: "How did you sleep?"

"Nice. How about you? Did you sleep nice?"

"Very nice."

Actually, I had not had an astonishingly pleasant night. There had been a mediumweight nightmare some time during the hour of the wolf, but on the other hand it hadn't waked me with such terror that I had to get up and go into the parlor and read myself back to sleep in the Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin. Not a really awful night's sleep, and not a wonderful one either. Just nice.

To make conversation I said that breakfast was nice. It was, too. There was frozen orange juice and ersatz cholesterol-free bacon followed by caffeine-free coffee. It was pretty artificial but still a good deal tastier than no breakfast at all. It was nice to have a breakfast when you considered that the alternative was hunger. I could see I was going to have a nice day.

This proved to be the case. The people on the subway were nice. Nobody you would want to meet, but nobody trying to kill anybody else either. Just nice people. The subway was nice, too. Filthy, as usual, but most of the lights were working. It wasn't one of the dazzling subways such as come along every few months or so, but it wasn't one of the really unspeakable subways either. It was just a nice subway.

Things at the office were also nice, which wasn't terribly interesting, but on the other hand didn't leave you with heartburn or indigestion or an urge to ask the widow in accounting to run away with you to Macao and start a new life.

"It's very nice at the office today," I remarked to a nice vice-president, and he was so pleased that he invited me out for a nice lunch.

We had a nice talk. "Whatever they say about President Carter," he said, "nobody can say he isn't nice."

"The president is nice, all right," I pointed out, "but have you noticed how nice Ronald Reagan is, but in a different way from President Carter?"

"That's a nice concept," he said. "It's nice for the country having two nice men to guide our destiny."

"I don't think niceness is too much for the American people to ask for," I said.

Walking back to the office we saw a nice madwoman. Not a wonderful madwoman who thrusts hundred dollar bills into your pocket and disappears into the crowd, and not a dreadful madwoman who accuses you of kidnapping her babies and slaughtering her cattle, but just a nice madwoman who was walking through the streets screaming to herself about a volcano erupting in her kitchen sink.

It was like that all day. Arriving home, being asked, "How was your day?" and replying, "Nice; how was yours?" I received the reply, "Very nice."

Then we had some martinis and got out the pistol and shot out the tube in the television set. The woman downstairs came up to see if anyone was hurt. "We just shot the television set," I explained. "That's nice," she said. "Not really great because you could have missed and hit the wall and not have to buy a new telly. But not really terrible either, since you didn't shoot each other. Just nice."

I made us all another martini and propounded the theory that the 1980s were going to be The Nice Decade and we all had a nice chat. It was a nice evening. I mean, it wasn't V-J Day in Times Square, but it wasn't London in the 13th century either. Just nice, so nice, like President Carter and Ronald Reagan, only in a different way.

Xiangsheng: The Chinese chuckle

By JAY MATHEWS
The Washington Post

PEKING — Three inmates in a Peking prison asked each other how they had gotten into such a fix.

"I am here because I supported Deng Xiaoping," said one, referring to China's controversial vice premier.

"I am here because I opposed Deng Xiaoping," said the second inmate.

The two looked at the third man, who said: "I AM Deng Xiaoping."

After some hard times, this type of Chinese humor — understated, sardonic and tickling at the ribs of irrational authority — has bubbled back to the surface of Chinese life. Communist leaders still don't understand what has hit them.

The art of the comic dialogue, formed by centuries of history and once enjoyed in secret by Mao, has been revived in recent months by hundreds of thousands of professional and amateur performers. These dialogues, known as xiangsheng, or "face and voice," call for clever use of ambiguity and double meanings.

A favorite target of today's Chinese comedians is the revolutionary excesses of the Communist Party and its most fervent followers. Two comedians, Jiang Kun and Li Wen-hua, do a number called "The Photo Studio:"

When Jiang, a customer, can get no service, he sees a sign on the wall: "Every revolutionary comrade who steps through the revolutionary entrance and wants to have a revolutionary photo made in this revolutionary studio must shout revolutionary slogans."

Jiang: Serve the People! Excuse me, comrade.

Li: Fight Selfishness and Repudiate Revisionism! Yes, what can I do for you?

Jiang: Eliminate Bourgeois Ideology, Foster Proletarian Ideology! I want to have a photo made.

Li: Overcome Selfishness and Foster Public Spirit! What size?

Jiang: Revolution Is Blameless! Three inches.

The comics say they are lampooning the excesses of the Cultural Revolution of 1966-76, but sloganeering lingers on in China. The point cannot be lost on present-day audiences.

Ma Ji, a chubby comedian who is sort of a Chinese Buddy Hackett, was discovered in Hollywood fashion in 1956.

Ma and his partner, dour and slender Tang Jiezhong, have a routine that satirizes — and, in the ambiguous way of xiangsheng, also justifies — the unrevolutionary lives that many Chinese youths are now trying to lead. In the rather cold-blooded fashion of Chinese romance, Ma is about to be questioned by his girlfriend, so Tang shows him how to answer:

Ma begins: "What's on your mind each day?"

"I want to contribute more each day to the Four Modernizations," Tang replies.

"What are your shortcomings?"

"I feel I don't have enough education."

"What are you doing about that?"

"I will study hard . . . What do you think of my answers?"

"No good," Ma replies. "You haven't passed this test."

"Why not?"

"Those answers are not for lovers, are they?"

So Tang questions Ma: "What's on your mind each day?"

"I want to carry on our love each day."

"What are your shortcomings?"

"My only shortcoming is I don't have enough money."

"What are you doing about that?"

"I want to borrow a little more."

Confidential files access Williams' main concern

Insurance investigators using high-powered surveillance devices to spy on claimants don't bother Attorney-General Allan Williams.

What worries him is the possibility that Insurance Corporation of B.C. snoops may have access to confidential records.

"Abuse of information is a matter which does concern me," Williams said Monday.

"If there has been improper use of private records or information, we have to look at the laws governing such information.

"This is one of the problems arising out of the modern computer age—that so much information is now assembled concerning any one of us.

"Anyone who has access to that probably can get far more information than they should."

The investigators are reported to have easy access to confidential records because most of them are former policemen and know how to go about it.

ICBC admits it uses private investigators to spy on claimants suspected of faking an injury. There are 25 to 30 such cases every month.

But the corporation denies its snoopers still use "entrapment" to catch rip-off artists. That was banned in ICBC guidelines brought down in September, 1977.

Williams said ICBC's use of telescopic lenses for surreptitious filming or parabolic microphones for long-distance eavesdropping is legal.

"You can always investigate that way. Whether you can get the evidence into court is another matter," he said.

The minister responsible for ICBC, Jim Hewitt, backed the investigators' efforts, saying any disclosure of insurance fraud helps keep premiums down.

Skaters in park confined

VANCOUVER (CP) — The parks board has untracked Stanley Park roller skaters, banishing them to a tiny 2.3-mile course in the southwest corner of the park.

The decision, unanimously accepted by the board Monday, ends a bitter year-long battle for control of the seawall, which escalated after an elderly woman suffered a broken hip in March when knocked down by a skater.

Park superintendent Vic Kondrosky outlined the plan, which effectively limits roller skating to paths surrounding Lost Lagoon and the Beach House restaurant. The road north of the lagoon will be closed to cars under the plan, while other roads will be divided by barricades into a single lane for vehicles and another for roller skaters and cyclists.

The plan is expected to be enforced by the Victoria Day weekend and violators will be ticketed, Kondrosky said.

Changes in act to make timber salvaging easier

The forests ministry will make it easier for small logging companies in the province to salvage waste timber not used by larger operators.

Included in Forest Amendment Act introduced in the legislature Monday by Forests Minister Tom Waterland is a provision for the issuing of special timber sales within existing licence areas.

"This will, I think, do a lot to encourage the salvage of previously-unused wood waste," Waterland said.

"There's a lot of small operators with a desire to get into sites which have been harvested to salvage the material that the normal licensee finds unuseable."

The small logging operators, who said they would be forced to go out of business if they could not get waste logs, have been advocating such a move for a long time.

The other amendments cover a number of areas including reorganization of the forests ministry, tree farm licences and forest roads.

The act makes provision for either regional managers or district managers of B.C.'s six forest regions to assume responsibility for clauses in the Forest and Range Acts.

Other amendments provide for:

—Timber sale licences to be combined or split up when being replaced;

—Clarification of several clauses of the present Forest Act dealing with stumpage appraisals; —Authorization of persons to be designated as fire wardens.

Hospital plans okayed

Construction of a 250-bed community hospital in Port Coquitlam and improvements to hospitals in New Westminster and Surrey have been approved in principle by the provincial government.

Health Minister Rafe Mair said the Eagle Ridge hospital in Port Coquitlam — the largest element in the $78 million program — was recommended by an review team set up by his ministry.

The proposal calls for a 250 acute care bed hospital, with 50 beds shelled in for completion when required, and reflects the projected population growth of the area, Mair said.

The minister and Premier Bill Bennett made the formal announcements during a question-and-answer session at Centennial Senior Secondary school in Coquitlam.

The review team also recommended a new nursing tower at Royal Columbian Hospital in New Westminster to increase total capacity to 500 beds and the addition of 72 acute care beds at Surrey Memorial Hospital.

Mair said ministry staff will begin work immediately on detailed planning for each of the projects.

Air Canada's steak rates highly with Hy Aisenstat.

BUT OUR DUCK A L'ORANGE IS TERRIFIC.

Hy Aisenstat, President, Hy's of Canada Ltd.—restaurants, Victoria to Toronto

Hy Aisenstat's business takes him to good restaurants across Canada. His own. Given a choice, Hy flies Air Canada, mainly because Air Canada gives him more choice.

More flights to more places more often than any other airline in Canada, a consistent on-time performance record surpassing most major airlines operating in North America, along with convenient curbside check-in facilities at Vancouver Airport.

Hy usually flies on super-quiet, super-smooth, super-comfortable, wide-bodied 747's and L1011's, and he gets the kind of friendly, efficient service that was recently voted second of 14 top international airlines by one of the world's most respected critics.

But when it comes to meals, how do we please so demanding a man as Hy? By choosing food fresh each morning; by having it prepared and delivered fresh to the plane minutes before take-off; by offering an extensive repertoire of main courses ranging from fresh halibut in wine sauce to top sirloin steak with baked potato, to duck à l'orange with Grand Marnier sauce. And that's just our economy class.

The best schedule, consistently top on-time performance, friendly service and fresh food, freshly prepared, make Air Canada Hy Aisenstat's first choice for business flights.

Ask your travel agent or Air Canada to give you the Executive Choice. No other airline has it.

As Hy says: "Well, I wouldn't say Air Canada's steak is as good as mine, but their duck à l'orange is worth taking a trip for."

Details remain on coal deal

After five years of hints, predictions and optimistic pronouncements, the Social Credit government is closer than it has ever been to nailing down a multi-billion-dollar deal on northeast B.C. coal development.

But it may be weeks, even months, before final details are hammered out and even today's visit by Japan's Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira to Vancouver is not expected to produce the long-awaited announcement.

Although the contract is essentially between Canadian coal companies and Japanese steelmakers, it was a key topic of discussion between Prime Minister Trudeau and Ohira, who completes his two-day state visit today.

A federal spokesmen said the deal would probably have to be in the neighborhood of $350 million a year to be worthwhile from a Canadian point of view.

He said the two leaders spoke in terms of a 10-to-15 year agreement under which Canada would sell at least five million tons of coking coal annually to Japanese steelmakers.

There is also a good possibility of further sales of thermal coal, to be used for heating and electric power, he said.

Following Monday's meeting here between eight federal cabinet ministers and their provincial counterparts, Senator Bud Olson stated:

"The federal government has committed itself to be significantly more involved than they had been prior to this meeting."

Olson, minister of economic development, gave no details of that increased commitment.

Prior to Monday's meeting, Ottawa was reported balking at paying a portion of a $125 million B.C. Rail spur line to the coal fields.

Olson refused to answer direct questions on that point.

In an interview, he put a rider on federal participation.

"Our support is contingent on us being satisfied that the price and volumes and the time frame and so on is as good as we can get, so that it all boils down to economic benefit to us."

Expenditures required to support development of the coal fields include $215 million for the spur to link up with B.C. Rail which connects with the CNR at Prince George; $300 million for rolling stock; $100 million to upgrade the CNR line between Prince George and Prince Rupert and $60 million to bring the port of Prince Rupert to full potential.

Meanwhile, the mayors of five communities in southeastern B.C. said Monday the northeast coal development should be done at minimum public expense with no adverse effect on the economic well-being of the southeast where most of the coal now exported is derived.

Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin announced that site preparation for the long-awaited $42.5-million port development at Ridley Island near Prince Rupert will begin in July.

The government has already announced it will build a new $13.8 million wharf at the site and then recover costs from the Prince Rupert Grain Terminal Consortium — a group of seven grain companies supporting the project.

Pepin said a letter of understanding has been signed by the consortium and the National Harbors Board on the user-pay formula by which the federal government will recover construction costs.

Early ratification of the agreement by members of the consortium and the federal government is expected, he said.

To counteract disappointment over lack of an immediate coal deal, the federal ministers came to Victoria armed with several other announcements:

—Ottawa will provide the long-promised $4 million in loans for Trident Aircraft Ltd. of Sidney.

—Development of the major grain terminal on Ridley Island at Prince Rupert gets a green light.

—The way is cleared for expansion of the coal port at Roberts Bank near Tsawwassen.

—Progress was made on providing a degree of local autonomy for the Vancouver port authority.

—The commitment of federal financing for the Vancouver Trade and Convention Centre was renewed.

—B.C.'s plans for Transpo 86 in Vancouver were discussed.

Olson also promised to take back to Ottawa the B.C. government's concern over the cancellation of the federal capital cost allowance for apartment construction.

Following the official talks, several federal cabinet ministers paid a courtesy call on NDP leader Dave Barrett.

Barrett is expected to announce within a few days his own plans to go to Japan to promote the sale of B.C. thermal coal.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was down sharply in moderately active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in shares of Atco Ltd. was halted at the opening pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $19¾.

Trading in shares of General Motors Corp., which was halted during the morning, was down 3¼ to $50¼ by 1 p.m.

The company announced it has reduced its quarterly dividend to 60 cents a share from $1.15 a share.

The Ontario Securities Commission said that at the request of the company, it has issued a cease-trading order in two series of IU International Corp. preferred shares.

The order is for 15 days unless otherwise rescinded or revised, the commission said.

IU International stock was halted on the Toronto Stock Exchange on Monday and last traded at $15⅞.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A dropped 5 to $91, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas 2 to $28¾, Husky Oil 2 to $95, Cominco 1½ to $53½ and Seagram Co. ⅞ to $63⅜.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors shares sold off sharply, but the rest of the stock market pushed ahead in moderate trading.

GM shares led the active list, off 2⅜ to $42¼, following the company's declaration late Monday of a 60-cent-a-share second quarter dividend.

That marked a 63.6-per-cent decline from the $1.65 payout in May of last year. The company also said it was not sure it would show a profit for the current quarter.

Elsewhere, the bank prime lending rate continued its erratic decline of late in the wake of the steep slide in open-market interest rates.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market moved higher at the close of trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 444.9, up 1.3.

Industrials were mixed and golds firmed.

Canadian stocks were mixed.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 500 cattle and calves consisting mostly of slaughter cows of average condition and a light supply of slaughter steers.

Trade was moderate on steers and dull on slaughter cows with increased downward pressure on fat cattle and off grades. A1-2 steers traded steady with over 1,200 lbs. kinds discounted $2-3. No slaughter heifers on offer. All grades of slaughter cows traded $1 lower. Too few bulls on offer to quote.

A1-2 steers over 1,000 lbs. $70-$72; A1-2 over 1,200 lbs. 69-70. D1-2 cows 49-52; D3-5 45-50.

A light run of 800 lbs. feeder steers traded steady.

Company reports

Canadian Cabelsystems

Canadian Cablesystems Ltd. of Toronto had net income of $4.7 million or 55.2 cents a share in the first six months of its fiscal year, compared with $5.8 million or 71.1 cents in the similar period a year ago.

This year's figures do not include $3.6 million from the sales of shares in Tele-Capital Ltd.

Revenue for the six-month period, ended Feb. 29, totalled $32.5 million, compared with $19.2 million. Income from cable services rose to $27 million from $17.3 million.

Chieftain

EDMONTON (UPC) — Chieftain Development Co. Ltd. reports a record profit of $2.2 million for the first three months of the 1980 fiscal year, double the $1.1 million earnings in the same period last year.

The company reported gross revenues of $16.7 million, up 55 percent over the same quarter last year.

"Growth in all segments of the company's Canadian and U.S. operations contributed to the record financial results," the company said in a report to shareholders.

Petrosar

CORUNNA, Ont. (UPC) — Petrosar Ltd. reports a net income of $5.8 million on sales revenue of $179 million for the first quarter, a turnaround from the loss of $2.5 million on sales of $147 million in the same period in 1979.

Petrosar said there was a net loss of $1.32 per common share in the first quarter after providing for Class A Preference dividends of $9.8 million. This compares with a loss of $3.58 per common share in the first three months of 1979.

The company said the first-quarter results reflected improved prices for petrochemical and fuel products "due to strong market demand arising from the instability of world crude oil supplies."

Hunt manipulation escaped detection for three months

WASHINGTON (AP) - The billionaire Hunt brothers worked for three months last year to buy up to 42 million ounces of silver through a Bermuda-based company before the strategy was detected by the U.S. federal agency that monitors commodities.

The Commodity Futures Trading Commission acknowledged in a report Thursday that it was not aware until late September of the Hunt manipulations, which began in July.

Once the agency did detect these Hunt activities, "concern was heightened" that the brothers might imperil the silver market, commissioner Read Dunn said in an interview.

"It took us a while" to learn of the Hunts' veiled silver moves because the firm, International Metals Investment Co. Ltd., was outside the United States, Dunn said.

The report also said that despite intensified surveillance of the silver market, the commission "did not predict the rapid price declines that occurred after March 25."

While a sizeable downward movement in price was detected, the collapse on March 26 and 27 — which threw financial markets into turmoil — "was not anticipated," the report said.

Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt are scheduled to appear before a House of Representatives government operations subcommittee in an effort to avoid a contempt citation that carries a possible jail term of up to one year.

The House committee voted unanimously to pursue the contempt order after the Texas billionaires defied a subpoena to testify on Tuesday.

How Saxon outruns Xerox.
(The Saxon 302 vs. the Xerox 2600)

Saxon starts faster.
Our Saxon 302 compact plain paper copier starts faster and turns out copies quicker than the new Xerox 2600. That's just for starters.

Saxon runs easier.
Our Saxon has superior features. Two paper cassettes holding more than double the paper supply of the Xerox 2600. Press-tone controls. A self-diagnostic system. And a few other advances Xerox hasn't caught up with.

Saxon runs you less money.
With all this, the Saxon costs less to buy, rent or maintain than the Xerox.

Trident ambitions soar planes per month and 500 employees is reached.

The Trigull plane is a six-seater that in 1979 carried a price tag in the range of $120,000 to $150,000 each.

The company has already constructed two for test purposes.

In addition to the Trigull, Trident has hopes of participating in subcontracting work for McDonnell Douglas, which has landed a $2.7 billion contract to build new jet fighter planes for Canada.

Trident is operating out of a rented hangar at the airport.

The B.C. Development Corporation has built a new building nearby with 65,000 square feet of space for Trident's manufacturing project.

The building will be leased from the BCDC.

Vaverek said Trident will need both structures because of its prospects for extra work.

The restoration of the Trident project is expected to have a major impact on the economy of Sidney.

The original announcement had created a construction boom in new houses and condominiums, some of which were vacated when the layoff occurred last summer.

A new housing boom is anticipated in the Sidney area in view of the increased employment target.

The Trident story began in 1977 when the Vancouver-based company proposed assembling its unique amphibian plane at Pat Bay, where it could test landings on water as well as land.

In June, 1978, the federal Liberal government made pledges of loans and guarantees to help get the company started and the BCDC also pledged financial grants and loans.

On May 3, 1979, the project was launched and construction started on a new building.

But less than three weeks later, the Liberal government fell in the federal election and the new Conservative government said it would not honor the federal loan.

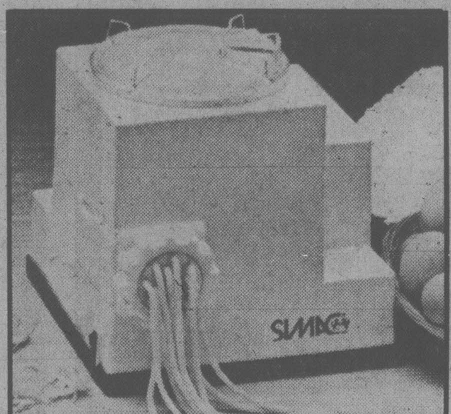
NEW CONCEPTS IN COOKING

BRAUN CONVECTION OVEN

The Bay presents the convection oven by Braun. This revolutionary cooking method works through the circulation of hot air. Convection cooking seals in moisture and results in juicier, more tender and more flavorful meats. It's much more economical, too, using less energy than an ordinary oven because it operates at a lower temperature. Featuring a continuous self-cleaning interior, the Braun convection oven weighs only 20 lbs. and measures a compact 17½"x18¼" x13¾". Reg. 329.98

Sale $299



SIMAC PASTA MACHINE

Once you've enjoyed the taste thrill of fresh, homemade pasta you'll never want to settle for less. And you needn't, with the new Simac pasta machine from the Bay. Now you can make your own pasta in just minutes. Put flour and eggs in the hopper and push a button. Presto pasta! Three discs are included for different styles. 229.98

WEST BEND FUTURA COOKWARE

West Bend brings you wonderful new aluminum bonded stainless steel cookware. It's especially designed to retain the moisture and precious vitamins in all the food you cook. Available in the ten piece set, consisting of a 1.5, 2 and 3 litre covered saucepans, 2.5 litre double boiler insert, 6 litre covered Dutch oven and 25cm. open skillet. Reg. 169.98

By PAT DUFOUR

Seven members of the University of Victoria Railway Club are back from Kelowna after a 58-mile trek along the abandoned Canadian Pacific Railway line between McCulloch Lake and Penticton.

The adventure was sparked by an article in the Dec. 15 Times' Weekend Magazine (now called Today) which described the efforts of the Kettle Valley Railway Heritage Society to save the abandoned track of the old Kettle Valley line. The group thinks the line has potential as a tourist attraction.

Caleb Small, president of the UVic club, contacted members of the society mentioned in the article and the 40 members of Small's club decided to throw their weight behind the efforts to save what is left of the line. The railway was completed in 1915.

Small and vice-president Michael Batten report that 100 miles of the track have already been ripped up but the KVRHS is getting a lot of support from the community to save the rest. The two groups' recent sortie along the remaining track, apart from the adventure, was to rally more support.

The Victoria contingent took along the speeder which took members 2½ years to complete. Leading the parade on the tracks was a Toyota land cruiser, carrying camping gear, food and other equipment.

Also in the nostalgic parade were two velocipedes (a one-man railway vehicle commonly used until recent years to service remote sections of track).

The other Victorians in the group were Peter Barlow, Alain Hargreaves, Paul Hearsey, Rod Glover and Jane Eert.

Small and Batten said in an interview they found the line in good shape.

"I was really impresssed with the track and condition of it. And the trestles are all in excellent condition," Small said.

UVic railway club members at Chute Lake . . . hospitality plus

Batten said there's an urgent need for action with 100 miles of good track already gone. He said the remainder of the track was brought up to scratch for the CBC's filming of The National Dream.

"What a feat it must have been to build the line in the first place, literally on the mountainside. It's quite an insult to the men who built it to tear it up."

There are 18 trestles on the route and four tunnels. In one of the tunnels the voyagers had to chip away a large block of ice to get through. When they reached the end of the tunnel they found a rock slide had to be cleared.

Because it is built much higher than the highways, Small and Batten said the scenery is breath-taking. At one point they met a man driving his van along the track enjoying the surroundings.

"He was driving the van right down the rails," Small said.

Support from residents along the way added to the enjoyment of the trip. At one stop the Chute Valley Lodge owners provided, free, a fine dinner and breakfast and room to camp overnight.

Having met and helped their Mainland counterparts, the UVic club has received some help in return. While the club's first speeder was built laboriously from scratch, the club has been given parts that will allow them to quickly assemble another.

They also have promises of support in their campaign to save some of the abandoned Canadian National Railway track on Vancouver Island.

"It's so easy to break it up (track) for scrap but think of all the engineering that went into some of these lines," Small said.

TOWN TALK

We've heard of ice carvings and molded chocolate statuettes but one restaurant's weekend advertisement for a roast beef dinner marks a culinary advance of major proportions.

The Waddling Dog Inn on the Pat Bay Highway advertised in Saturday's Times a $7.95 Sunday buffet from noon to 3 p.m.

"We will be carving a hip of beef to your likeness," said the ad.

It might start a whole new dining experience — prime rib famous faces, pork chops that look like Grandma used to. Big Macs that look like Ronald McDonald.

Will that be silhouette or three-quarter profile, sir? A little less on the nose please, waiter.

Those folks over at Gulf Islands Secondary School are fond of slipping zingers into the classified columns of the Gulf Islands Driftwood.

Town Talk reported Friday the students had sold the school through a cleverly-worded ad describing the hilltop building as a 10-bedroom home with several bathrooms, workshops, playrooms and large open areas.

The asking price was $198,000 or best offer and rumor had it the teachers snapped it up for $1.98. At the same time they apparently placed their own sneaky ad in the paper.

"HELP, Moving to Colombia. Must find good homes for 55 adorable, loving children before June 21. All are house-trained, shots given; some on medication. June 22 — giant rummage sale of 55 containers; rare treasures such as mouldy lunches, fascinating pictures, sports equipment, odd socks, rare books, broken lids, insect collections. $3.6M Camsell job awarded to Yarrows

The Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Camsell was towed by a Seaspan tug into Yarrows shipyard on Monday for a $3.6-million repair and refit job.

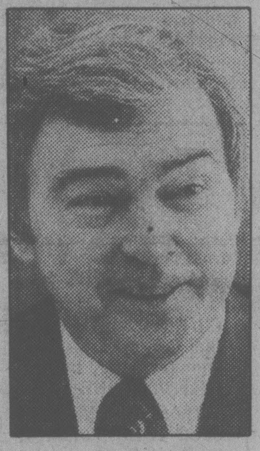
General manager Don Challinor said the year-long Camsell project will enable the yard to "continue the rather high level of employment — nearly 800 jobs."

H.O. Buchanan of Vancouver, the ministry of transport's regional director of marine services, said the final cost of readying the Camsell for a return to duty will be about $5 million with the department doing some of the work itself.

He said it has taken 18 months of negotiations with Ottawa to get the green light on the project.

The icebreaker received two gashes when she struck ice in Queen Maude Gulf, east of Cambridge Bay on Sept. 10, 1978. Her engine room flooded and the ship sank so low in the water that her deck was awash.

Yarrows has subcontracted to Westinghouse for the electrical equipment portion of the project. Westinghouse conducted a $50,000 study to determine the cost of repairs in 1979.



CHALLINOR

Challinor said the project will take a year because the electrical equipment will have to be taken out and rebuilt.

In addition to the repairs, the accommodation for officers aboard the Camsell will be upgraded. The men's quarters were modernized before the Arctic mishap.

A sewage holding tank will also be installed. Challinor said this should cost less than $100,000.

Normally, the Camsell would be leaving for her Western Arctic run in early July.

This year, MoT's district manager Larry Slaght said the Quebec City-based icebreaker J.E. Bernier will come to the West Coast via the Panama Canal to replace the Camsell in the Western Arctic. The J.E. Bernier will arrive in Victoria shortly before having to leave for the Western Arctic.

Since Camsell was knocked out of action, the Narwhal has been used to carry out buoy-tending and other duties on this coast that are normally done by Camsell.

Slaght said he hopes to retain the Narwhal until after Camsell returns from her Arctic tour of duty in October 1981.

More than 35,000 Canadians have MS, a chronic, crippling disease which most often hits people between 20 and 40.

Elworthy to sue BCSC for wrongful dismissal

Arthur Elworthy said Monday he will bring suit against B.C. Steamship Corp. for wrongful dismissal.

Elworthy lost his job as president and general manager of the Crown corporation in a fight over the Princess Marguerite.

He said he received a letter last week from David Price, the new acting general manager, informing him that as of April 30 his medical and dental plan membership and his group life insurance plan benefits will cease.

Although it was widely reported in March that the government fired Elworthy, he told the Times that except for the Price letter he has had no official word on his status and had remained at his post.

"That's the only notification I've ever had," he said, referring to Price's letter.

"Nobody in the government has talked to me."

He said apart from a statement by Industry Minister Don Phillips March 11 at a B.C. Steamship board meeting that the government had lost confidence in him, there has been no communication.

At that meeting Elworthy was not re-elected to the board of directors of the company, and it was stated by Transport Minister Alex Fraser that he was the new president and Price, the Seattle agent for the company whom Elworthy hired, was the acting GM.

"Nobody has had the guts to stand up and talk to me," he said.

"I don't know if it's stopped or not," Elworthy said in reference to his pay.

He said he worked half of April at B.C. Steamship.

Elworthy, 58, served as president and general manager of the B.C. government agency from 1976.

"The government asked me to take it on and try to do something."

Elworthy said he thinks he did a good job, taking the fledgling company from a loss of more than $1 million that year to a profit of several hundred thousand dollars in 1979.

Elworthy clashed with the government on the matter of a replacement vessel for the Marguerite.

He wanted the larger Queen of Surrey to replace the 32-year-old steamship, then reverted to the Marguerite (which he had condemned earlier as unsafe) when the government gave him the smaller, slower Queen of Prince Rupert (now the Victoria Princess) instead.

Before taking on the B.C. Steamship presidency, he spent his working life in the towboat business.

Newsmen spook businessmen

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A presentation to city council of a major downtown development proposal was cancelled today because there were too many prying reporters present.

Downtown businessmen Philip Holmes and Tom Denny came prepared with a slide show on their concept for redeveloping two square blocks in the heart of Victoria, but shied away from publicity at the last moment.

Their pitch was scheduled for the informal committee of the whole council, a meeting which is open to the public and press but is not advertised in advance. Sometimes it is attended only by council members.

But with half a dozen newsmen there who had heard rumors of something big in the works for the blocks bounded by Douglas, Yates, Government and Johnson, the proponents and their council sponsor, Ald. Ron McKenzie, cancelled out.

McKenzie came over to the press table where the slide projector was set up and pocketed about a dozen slides which were ready for showing. He refused to give any information on the proposal, but reporters got a bare outline from Mayor Bill Tindall and other sources.

Holmes and Denny left city hall and could not be contacted later for comment.

Apparently, it involves a scheme similar to the redevelopment that changed the face of downtown Vancouver, the Bronfmans' project that put up highrise office towers and hotel space and underground shopping malls at Georgia and Granville.

The Denny-Holmes plan is reported to combine a hotel with retail and office space, plus a transportation terminal on the two blocks in downtown Victoria.

One facet of the plan is believed to involve bringing in the E & N Railway by tunnel under Market Square, and possibly to provide terminal space for buses as well.

"I can't comment on it because it involves land acquisition," was all McKenzie would say when contacted by reporters after.

He said any publicity now would be premature as "the thing is not put together. The whole thing is very speculative at the moment."

Mayor Bill Tindall said he told Holmes and Denny, both key figures in the downtown business establishment, that they could take their chances on the morning caucus being ignored by the press.

He suggested once their cover was blown that the proper route would be to present the plan to the Advisory Planning Commission study session, always held behind closed doors.

McKenzie confirmed this was the next step he and the backers would now take.

Real Rocks took long time to show

By BILL WALKER

It took a while — about 30 minutes in fact — for the real Victoria Shamrocks to show up at Memorial Arena for their Western Lacrosse Association opener Monday night.

But when they did, although they weren't yet a patch on the Mann Cup champions of 1979, the imprint was still there.

Three times spotting Vancouver Burrards a five-goal lead, the last time at 10:23 of the second period, the Rocks roared from behind with eight straight goals for an 11-8 victory.

It was their second win and the third loss in as many games for Burrards.

Not that it was easy. It wasn't and freshman coach Joe McCrea was less than enthusiastic with the performance.

"We played just terrible for the first half of the game," he said. "And it wasn't until we got those key goals near the end of the second period that we played like I think we can. We didn't block and our teamwork was poor."

Of course there may have been a reason for the lethargic beginning.

The Rocks, who started the season eight players short from last year's champions, were also shy three others being counted on this season.

Andy Reid was out of town. Jeevan Dillon is recovering from a field lacrosse injury and rookie Jim Boyd has suffered at work what is feared to be a broken wrist.

Besides, the club rarely drilled as a complete team before the season, and it showed.

However, what was left, was still class, even if only two players — Jim Lynch and Kevin Alexander — shouldered the scoring load.

Lynch, probably in his finest shape after a season of field lacrosse, got the Irish started with his second of five goals at 13:46 of the second with Burrards leading 8-3.

Alexander, who was to score three, and Tej Labh followed with power-play goals before the period ended to bring the Rocks to a more respectable 8-6 and the Irish, it turned out, were on their way.

Before that it had been an exhibition of two teams who didn't really seem up to scratch and were still trying to figure out some of the new rules.

As it was, Burrards got the knack first and scored two shorthanded goals en route to a 4-1 first-period lead. Then, in the second period with the Shamrocks hit by a rash of penalties, one a five-minute major (one of the new rules) to Dave Thomson for violently checking a player into the boards, they upped the count to 7-2 on three power-play goals. Meanwhile, rookie Brian Celli was performing well in goal for the visitors and giving no indication that he might be vulnernable.

But things changed, the Rocks started to assume command and with all-star goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer bolting the door for those final 29 minutes and 37 seconds, it was Burrards who packed it in.

Shamrock captain Larry Bell scored the goal to make it 8-7, Lynch got his third to tie the score and 28 seconds later his fourth to give the Rocks the lead.

Burrards collapsed completely, took several bad penalties and paid for it.

The new rules, which are designed to cut down on rough play, did that. But the players seemed unsure what the officials were going to call, their play suffered, and perhaps the officials were tentative as well.

Still, it should work out in the next few weeks and certainly a team with a good power play is going to benefit until things get settled.

Monday's game proved the wisdom of having an odd-man success story. Seven of the Shamrocks goals came from the power play. Burrards had three.

Lynch had four assists to go with his five goals for the Irish. Alexander had three goals and seven assists. Labh, Bell and Chris Hall had singletons.

Dave Tasker, Mike Holden and Bruce Turris each had two goals for Burrards with singles going to Dan Perrault and Terry Bingley.

Ball in Manitoba 'hall'; 10 honored at inaugural

About people and things, and another honor for a deserving Victorian.

Jimmy Ball, one of Canada's premier runners and a hall-of-famer, was recently inducted into Manitoba's Sports Hall of Fame along with nine others at the inaugural event. Ball, who will be best remembered for his second-place finish, by inches, to Ray Barbutti of the United States in the 400 metres at the 1928 Olympics at Amsterdam, otherwise had a flock of world class and international accomplishments during his heyday in the sport.

Ball, who will be 77 on Wednesday, and is in good health, says he and his wife had a wonderful time at the ceremonies in Winnipeg. Others honored — and ex-prairie folk, who heeded the message to come west, may recall them for what they did — were: Judith Moss (Kennedy), now of Vancouver, winner of a gold medal in diving at the 1934 British Empire Games; Ken Watson, the man they say wrote the book on curling; George Anderson, 90-year old Mr. Soccer of Manitoba; Fritzie Hanson, the Golden Ghost of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers; Eric Coy, discus, javelin and shot-put competitor of the Olympics and British Empire Games; Mike Goodman, the only living member of the Icelandic-bred collection who made up the World hockey champion Winnipeg Falcons of 1920; Cec Browne, Manitoba's athlete of the century (1870-1970); Bill Mosienko, poetry on skates and still holder of the NHL record of three goals in 21 seconds, and Eddie Cass, Winnipeg's Mr. Baseball.

As a first, the event was a gala affair attended by 700 including Manitoba's Lieutenant Governor F.L. (Bud) Jobin, Manitoba premier Stirling Lyon and Winnipeg mayor Bill Norrie. Now officials are making plans to make the affair an annual event and looking for a place to show off the memorabilia.

Come to think of it, I wonder why the mayors of the municipalities around here don't attend the annual Victoria's Sportsmen's Dinner? Everyone is welcome.

And "happy birthday" to you, Jimmy, from all of us.

But there is a sadness in the air as well. Last week, Victoria lost one of its better-known athletes. Vince Clarkson, a member of a well-known athletic family and a competitor in several sports in his time, passed away much too soon. He was 53. We at the Times (see Ernie Fedoruk's column) join with his many friends in offering condolences to the family.

Otherwise, dunk that "pool" image as being a sign of mis-spent youth. At Sheffield, England, a Torontonian who learned his trade here, Cliff Thorburn realized his life's ambition. Thorburn won the world professional snooker championship. He played his first game of snooker in the basement of the Strathcona Hotel when he was 15, won his first of three North American championships in 1971, turned professional in 1973 and got as far as the quarter-finals of the world's professional championship in 1975 before being bombed 11 games to one. It was then he figured he could make it to the top one day as he said on the occasion of his last visit here in 1977. Naturally, congratulations are in order.

Meanwhile, in Seattle and on the mainland, the Budgets were showing that they are very much alive and in the hunt for yet another Canadian men's softball championship. Three out of four is fair enough for openers . . . Elsewhere, UVic's Rene Dolcetti was still listed with Canada's national basketball team when it played in Puerto Rico . . . Wayne Isbister of our town and the defending champion, is in the thick of a four-way battle with Harold Barroby, the leader, and George Cummins and Harry Johnson in the trainers' derby at Exhibition Park . . . Fraser McColl feels he may have a good one in the two-year old St. Johnstone which ran third at Ex Park Monday . . . and, for the edification of Bob Shanks, the only triple dead heat for first in racing occurred right here and not in Vancouver. It was at the Willows and the date was Sept. 21, 1940. You were right, Bob, in the names of two, Marjorie Daw (6-1) and My Debut (40-1). Saucy Maid (16-1) was the third. Incidentally, the race was a claimer ($800) and the reward something less than outstanding. Total purse was $274 which meant $83 to each of the winners. The five also-rans each got $5 for showing up.

Thorburn tames the Hurricane

SHEFFIELD, England (Reuter) — Canada's Cliff Thorburn became the first player from outside the British Isles to win the world professional snooker title, beating Northern Irishman Alex (Hurricane) Higgins 18-16 in the final Monday.

Thorburn, the sixth seed from Toronto, trailed former-title-holder Higgins 5-1 and 9-5 in the early stages but had pulled up to 9-9 in Sunday's play.

Never more than two frames separated the players Monday as the match — the best of 35 frames — edged toward its exciting climax.

In the end, Thorburn's ice-cool nerves withstood the pressure better and, although Higgins pulled back from 16-15 down to 16-16, the Canadian took the 33rd and 34th frames to clinch the $33,000 winner's prize.

The 32-year-old Canadian, a former resident of Victoria, appeared to become more relaxed in the closing stages of the match. A couple of masterful shots pulled Thorburn out of the 16-16 deadlock with Higgins.

"I'm speechless, I don't believe it," said Thorburn.

Stars won't play dead

Times News Services

Minnesota North Stars, a Cinderella hockey team if ever there was one, pressed mighty Philadelphia to the limit Sunday night before succumbing to the Flyers, 5-3.

But don't believe the North Stars are dead. Just ask Bill Barber, the Flyers' left winger whose four goals Sunday topped Minnesota's total.

"This series is a long way from being over," said Barber. "They sure don't need to hang their heads."

The best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final series resumes tonight at the Met Centre, with the fifth game scheduled for the Spectrum in Philadelphia on Thursday and a sixth game, if necessary, back in Bloomington on Sunday.

The other semi-final could wind up when it resumes tonight. New York Islanders enjoy a 3-0 advantage over Buffalo Sabres.

"We can win this thing if we play like we did in the second and third periods," said Minnesota centre Bobby Smith, a second-year player who epitomizes the youthful exuberance and impressive talent the surprising North Stars have put together.

The Stars, who compiled the sixth-best record in the NHL during the regular season, found they were capable of much more than that by disposing of Toronto Maple Leafs in three straight games during the preliminary round and then beating Montreal Canadiens in seven games.

"I would expect them to come out chomping," said Philadelphia coach Pat Quinn. "They're tenacious. It's reflected in the type of leadership they have."

Barber's third goal of the game gave the Flyers a comfortable four-goal lead in the second period, but the Stars then scored three times — two while playing with a manpower disadvantage and once on a power play — in a three-minute span.

Minnesota pressed for the tying goal but Barber produced his fourth while the Flyers were a man short to restore a two-goal Philadelphia lead and silence the excited crowd.

"We're not going to quit," added Minnesota winger Steve Payne. "We'll keep on plugging and hope things start going our way."

Pats lose second

BRANDON (CP) — Cornwall Royals combined superior firepower and a steady defence to roll to a 5-3 victory over Regina Pats in game two of the 1980 Memorial Cup series Monday night.

The win sets the stage for the meeting tonight between Cornwall, the Quebec representative in the battle for the Canadian major junior hockey championship, and Ontario's Peterborough Petes.

Peterborough dumped Regina 5-4 in overtime Sunday night.

The action was fast and hard-hitting, but turned chippy at times, allowing each team to score two power-play goals.

The difference in the game was inside the Cornwall blueline where the Royals displayed strong backchecking and heady defence, constantly breaking up the Regina attack.

Left winger Mark Crawford led the Royals with two goals as Cornwall outshot Regina 54-27 before 3,540 fans.

Fred Boimistruck, Dave Ezard and Newell Brown scored the other Cornwall goals. Centre Dale Hawerchuk had three assists.

Defenceman Dave Veitch fired two goals for Regina and forward Brian Varga added one.

Pats' coach Bryan Murray is now faced with the situation where his team must win both its games in Regina by big margins to have any chance of qualifying for the final.

"We've been backed into a corner now and the kids have to respond and play with a little pride and determinination," Murray said. "If they don't we will be out of it."

Bright spot for Regina was the work of goaltender Bart Hunter who kept his team in the game in the first two periods when the Pats were outshot 37-18 but trailed only 3-2.

Glove incident costly

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The National League handed out its longest player suspension ever for a game incident when it punished Pittsburgh Pirates' third baseman Bill Madlock on Monday for his run-in with an umpire.

National League president Charles (Chub) Feeney suspended Madlock for 15 days.

Others have been banned for longer periods, but the suspensions were either issued by clubs or for activities that originated off the baseball field.

In arguing with home plate umpire Jerry Crawford over a third strike last Thursday, Madlock pushed his glove in the official's face. A league spokesman said the suspension was severe because it involved an umpire.

Feeney also fined Madlock $5,000, far less than he'll lose on his estimated $250,000 annual salary. With a daily paycheque of about $1,380, 15 days of unemployment might cost Madlock about $20,700.

Amid grief, fond memories of a smile and personality

Sunday's walk around Victoria Golf Club during the Vancouver Island Open was a chore. Too many memories of the smile that walked and played golf, tennis, softball, basketball and other sports.

Vince Clarkson's battle with cancer ended Friday, and the sadness was much in evidence at the weekend because he was, truly, one of sport's nice guys.

He was extremely talented in many sports and an undisputed champion in the personality department. That was what made Vince's death so difficult to comprehend. Because he was such a dedicated family man, words can not adequately express the heartfelt sympathies that are extended to Ida and the Clarkson family.

It will be Dave Mick, 29 and the defending champ, against Stu Holroyd, 22 and the darkhorse; in next Sunday's all-amateur playoff for the CFAX Trophy and the Vancouver Island Open title.

They have met before.

Last year, Holroyd carried Mick to the 19th hole before losing a second-round meeting at Royal Colwood.

Holroyd has been "coming on" since his last exam at UVic and should give Mick a battle at Glen Meadows. Because of studies, Stu had played only a few rounds of golf this year until the qualifying round. He wrote his final exam on the Thursday following the qualifying round. Only then was he able to practice.

He'll spend all of this week "hitting balls" before concerning himself with the important task of a summer job.

Until this year, Stu's major achievements in golf have been a victory in the Esquimalt Amateur and three junior titles at his home Gorge Vale course.

Now that Uplands has made the decision, Colwood and Cedar Hill are the only clubs ignoring a qualifying format in selecting Inter-Club League teams.

Uplands, Victoria, Glen Meadows and Gorge Vale base their selections on qualifying trials while Colwood and Cedar Hill's captains, usually after discussion with other club members, select their respective teams.

Glen Meadows already has completed its qualifying series. Counting only the best three of four rounds, pro John Morgan (215) led the way and was followed by pro Bob Beauchemin (224) and amateurs Phil Scott (227), Al Cliff (228), Marty Richards (229), Don Gowan (230), Ed Beauchemin (230), Don Norbury (231) and Roger Hollick (232).

There may be a flock of golfing talent in the southern states, but Lamar University at Beaumont, Tex., doesn't mind recruiting from the north.

Among the golfers on the campus, seven are from Canada, including four from B.C. No. 1 and No. 2 on the team of five are Lynn Cook of Vancouver and Lake Cowichan's Dawn Coe. The other B.C. girls are Jill Johnson of Salt Spring Island and Patty Grant of Prince George.

School gets out this week but both Coe and Cook will remain and practice for the national collegiate championship at Albuquerque, N.M., later this month.

BRIEFLY: Victoria's Jim Rutledge, campaigning in a four-tournament mini tour in Texas, has collected cheques from all three events already played . . . His biggest payoff was $1,000 . . . The Victoria and District Committee is expected to meet this week to finalize plans for an Inter-Club League for "grey area" golfers . . . It was originally proposed by Uplands captain John Pierpoint, who noted that juniors (under 18), seniors (over 55) and hotshots (the good 'uns) all enjoyed inter-club competition but that there was nothing for the "in betweens." . . . The Grey Area League may be for golfers in the 9-18 handicap range or for those between 35 and 55 years of age . . . The restriction has not been settled and it could be determined by both age and handicap . . . The restriction to under-18 handicappers still excludes a lot of enthusiastic golfers . . . Jim Leslie, recording a net 63-66 — 129, was the winner of the Todd Cup at Victoria.

Intermediate champs help bolster Legion

While New Westminster Salmonbellies are generally regarded as the club to beat, Esquimalt Legion is confident of an improved performance in the Western Major Junior "A" Lacrosse League as they open against Richmond Roadrunners at Esquimalt Arena tonight.

General manager Bob Reid feels the addition of several players from last year's Canadian intermediate "A" champion Goodwill Bottlers plus the fact Legion has several returning veterans should augur well for the season ahead.

New Westminster is the power, Reid says, because it has virtually its entire club returning and the players are that much bigger than those of other clubs.

Legion newcomers include goalkeepers Herb Isherwood and Derek Croucher, Will Reid, Jim Lightbody, Mike Thomas, Gord Redlin, Al Zozula, Gord Taylor, Leigh Pollock and John Crowther.

Taylor, Lightbody and Thomas played field lacrosse for the Seasprays this past winter.

Returning players include Rhys Wickes and Terry Jay who are starting their fourth season, three-year performers Brian Bell, Mike Game and Ed Van Dyck, and second-year men Russ Kennedy, Kelly Bryant, Bruce Alexander and Dave Angrove. Van Dyck also was a member of Seasprays.

Dennis Somner, a 13-year veteran of the Shamrocks, has joined the club as assistant to coach Ken Alexander. Game time is 8 p.m.

Women softballers fail to get decision

No decision was reached in either game Monday in the Victoria-Saanich Women's Softball League.

Bemister's Welding and Victoria Athletics battled to a 2-2 deadlock while Island Dryco Breakers and Butler Brothers played to a 3-3 tie in action at Hyacinth Park.

Noni Maruca salvaged a point for Athletics when she singled in the tying run in the top of the seventh inning.

Linda Newcomb allowed only four hits for Athletics while Marilyn Bolton yielded eight hits for Bemister's.

Deanna Daniels knocked in two runs with a first-inning double and then stole home for the third run of the inning to spark Butler's attack.

Pam Jones threw a three-hitter for Dryco while Butler pitcher Mavis Underwood allowed six hits.

At Macdonald Park, Ron Maber hammered a home run to help Labatts record a 10-4 Macdonald Men's League victory over Rebels.

Myth:

To get good fuel economy you have to buy a small foreign car.

Fact:

This GM World Car is rated at 36.2 MPG† and is built in North America.

Chevette and Acadian have fuel economy ratings† that can not be beaten by any other North American car with a gasoline engine, including VW Rabbit!

Our World Car's fuel economy ratings help make it the best-selling small car in Canada.* But we think its popularity is the result of all-around value–at a price for Chevette Scooter and Acadian 'S' that is lower than any 1980 Honda, Datsun or Toyota hatchback, and is $2,167 less than the cheapest VW Rabbit.

All Chevettes and Acadians are four-passenger hatchbacks with comfortable full-foam seats, cut-pile carpeting, radial tires, rack-and-pinion steering, a maintenance-free battery, electronic ignition, an eager overhead-cam 1.6 litre 4-cylinder engine and 4-speed manual transmission. Plus extensive corrosion-resistance protection.

It all adds up. There are also 2- and 4-door Chevette and Acadian models available with a more extended list of standard features including an AM radio, reclining bucket seats, bodyside moulding, white-stripe radial tires and much more.

Drive one. Discover a small car that is smooth and quiet, has plenty of get up and go, and makes you feel good driving around town or heading down the highway.

Versions of these cars are sold on six continents. They are part of a continuing General Motors program to develop cars for a fuel-conscious world. It is this concept that helps explain the quality of Canada's best-selling small cars. Their popularity is proven.

This GM World Car is built to keep its good looks, with parts and service readily available at nearly 7,000 dealers across North America (over 1,000 in Canada), and, unlike the top four imports, it offers an optional Continuous Protection Plan. Ask your dealer for details. Whether you're buying or leasing, test drive one soon. Chevette at Chevy dealers, Acadian at Pontiac dealers.

Victoria driver hurt in crash at Portland

Gerry Vantreight is resting today after suffering a crash in his first super-modified race of the season at Portland Speedway at the weekend.

The 25-year-old Victorian was running third and trying to move into second place in the 30-lap main event of the Canadian-American Modified Racing Association event when he slammed into the grandstand wall after bumping with Lonnie Lonsdale of Seattle.

Vantreight was treated Monday in Victoria for cracked ribs and said he isn't sure how extensive the damage to his vehicle.

"We hope to have it ready for Boise (Idaho) in two weeks. And I hope I'm ready. I don't know how long it takes for these things to heal."

Lewis, Pallan share load for Landscapers

G and W Landscaping, sparked by three-goal efforts from Kerry Lewis and Rav Pallan, edged Saanich Metro Toyota 14-12 in Vancouver Island Senior "B" Lacrosse League action Monday at Pearkes Arena.

In the other game, Esquimalt Universal Sheet Metal downed Victoria Athletics, 17-8.

Mike Beaulac and Bill Kaye added a goal and four assists each for Landscaping.

Bill Van Buskirk set the pace for Saanich with two goals and an assist while Peter McCreash helped out with five assists.

Randy Bryant led the Esquimalt victory with five goals and three assists.

Michael Spinks extends streak

KIAMESHA LAKE, N.Y. (AP) — Unbeaten Michael Spinks scored a unanimous 10-round decision over Murray Sutherland in a light-heavyweight fight Sunday.

It was the 12th consecutive victory for Spinks, a gold medallist at the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

Mt. Doug runners take lead in relays

Two open events — a 1,000-metre men's race and an 800-metre women's event — will form an added attraction tonight as competition continues in the 12th annual All-School relays at Centennial Stadium.

Some of the top middle-distance runners in the Greater Victoria area, including Debbie Scott, Debbie Campbell, Cathy D'Arcy, Randy Cox, Tom Michel and Brian Hawksworth, are expected to compete.

Senior high school events started Monday and finish up tonight starting at 7:30.

The junior high and elementary segments of the meet start are scheduled for May 12 and 13, starting at 6 p.m. each day.

Mt. Douglas took an early lead in competition Monday with 40 points while St. Michael's University School is second with 25 in the 11-school battle.

Terry Bateman and Keith Butler finished one-two in the boys' 1,500 metres with times of four minutes, 7.5 seconds and 4:07.7, respectively. The Mt. Doug team also won the 4x800 relaywith a 9:17.5 clocking.

In the third final of the evening, Rosalid Penty of St. Michael's won the girls' 1,500 metres in 5:06.3.

Move dangerous prisoners, forget new fence: Perrault

Some of the dangerous criminals now at Agassiz Mountain medium-security prison should be moved to more secure institutions, Senator Ray Perrault said Monday in Victoria.

Perrault, who met with concerned residents of the Fraser Valley community during the weekend, said he sympathizes with them, and opposes — as they do — a move by Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan to have a second fence placed around the prison.

"The solution in my view is much more basic than putting up another chain-link fence with barbed wire at the top or installing an alarm system that can be heard all over the country," he said.

"That's very, very short term and it's stop gap and band-aid."

Perrault said some of the hard-core criminals have to be moved out of the prison.

"I think classification may be a problem — perhaps it's a staff shortage situation," he said.

"Perhaps extremely dangerous prisoners with serious problems should be kept in a maximum-security instead of a medium-security operation like Mountain Prison."

About 500 area residents met Sunday to discuss the situation, which came to a head after the postmaster of nearby Harrison Mills was found stabbed to death last week. Kirk McIlvride, who escaped from the prison the day before, has been charged with second-degree murder.

Mountain Prison has about 130 prisoners — more than 20 of them convicted murderers.

Mike Dunn, mayor of nearby Kent, told the crowd that Kaplan's promise of a second fence makes him think the government plans to expand the prison, rather than close it and build a one in the Interior, near Kamloops, as has been considered.

Perrault, the only Liberal cabinet minister from B.C., said the location of prisons in B.C. will have to be reviewed, noting that the Fraser Valley prisons were established at a time when the population of the area was much smaller.

"There are two or three communities in B.C. who want prisons," he said. "They want modern, high-security prisons.

"They regard this as a good payroll for the community and it is if properly developed. And I think we should think now in terms of relocating some of these institutions."

Before the judge

Two brothers were charged Monday in provincial court with a weekend break-in at the James Bay liquor store at 230 Michigan.

William Edward Donnelly, 32, of 215 Oswego, and Robert Powell Donnelly, 29, of 230 Oswego, were jointly charged with the Sunday breaking and entering, and with possession of stolen liquor.

William Edward Donnelly also was charged with breach of a Jan. 31 probation order made in county court by Judge M.L.T. Drake, and Robert Powell Donnelly was charged with theft of socket sets valued at $109.90 from Eaton's on April 24.

Judge Harold Alder released the younger brother on $1,000 surety bail and remanded both until today for election of trial method and, in the older brother's case, possible bail hearing.

A pre-sentence report was ordered by Alder for a 24-year-old woman who pleaded guilty to fraud.

Linda Jean Bell, who gave addresses of 1008 Pentrelew Place and 1007 Collinson, was remanded until May 26 for sentencing.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Bell was a waitress at the Meat Market Restaurant, 535 Yates, between Feb. 2 and March 15 when she altered cash register and charge card receipts to include tips and also pocketed some $2 charges for the salad bar.

Mulligan said about $17 was lost by the restaurant.

Fines totalling $2,150 were levied by Judge Lorne Pearce against 20-year-old Roger Paul Schiller, 1570 McTavish.

Schiller pleaded guilty to two counts each of driving while under suspension, driving without vaild insurance, and failing to display proper licence plates, and one count of of careless driving.

He was fined $500 ech on the driving while suspended, $250 each on the driving without insurance, $100 on the first licence plate infraction and $200 on the second, and $350 for careless driving.

Pearce also placed Schiller on two years probation and grounded him for two years.

Two men were given weekend jail sentences after pleading guilty to drinking-driving offences.

Judge Blake Allan handed out a 14-day intermittent term to Manjeet Singh Bains, 3851 Raymond, for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 on Nov. 30.

Crown counsel Clinton Kittle said Bains was involved in an accident in the 700-block Discovery in which his vehicle hit a light standard. Victoria police subsequently obtained breath test readings of .21 and .20.

Kittle said Bains was convicted April 25, 1979, of impaired driving and was fined $500.

Alder sent Carter Gordon Newton, 23, of 950 Lochglen, to jail for seven days after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

Court was told Colwood RCMP spotted Newton's motorcycle travelling east on the Old Island Highway at 110 km/h at 1 a.m. March 25. Officers stopped Newton at the intersection of the Trans-Canada Highway and Admirals and subsequently obtained breath test readings of .17 and .16.

Newton was convicted Feb. 15, 1979, of the same offence and was fined $75, Mulligan said.

Fined $400 for impaired driving was 53-year-old Jacobus Vanderzwall, 9155 West Saanich Road.

Bag ties held suspects: officer

Prisoner struck on head with shotgun

Suspected drug importers arrested in rugged terrain near Tofino last year had their wrists bound with plastic bag ties as they were led away at gunpoint, a policeman said Monday.

Constable John Pliszka of the RCMP drug squad was answering questions by defence counsel William Deverell at the county court trial of 23 men charged with importing marijuana and possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking.

Pliszka said the men fell and received cuts and scratches as they tumbled down through a rough trail to the beach where a party of policemen and a tracking dog had landed.

Pliszka said he believed most of the ties were removed for that reason.

Deverell suggested the ties were of a type that could restrict blood circulation because they would only cinch tighter, and the witness agreed.

Counsel Jeffrey Green asked Pliszka if he had been pointing a .38 pistol at the accused William Terry Hines' head as he stood over the prostrate prisoner.

Pliszka said it was possible he had the pistol drawn and he did recall asking Hines if there were any more people in the area.

But he did not recall saying, as alleged by Green, 'tell me, or I'll blow your head off.' "

Deverell suggested the accused Michael Walter Butler had been attacked by the police dog and was screaming, " 'get him off me', or 'get him away from me' ."

That was quite possible, Pliszka said.

"Did you know he was struck on the head with a shotgun?" Deverell asked.

Pliszka said he did not know it for a fact but believed it happened.

Counsel Josiah Woods, also in cross-examination, drew from the witness that Butler's pants were ripped and that he had blood on his head when Pliszka saw him after arresting another man.

The constable was present when 12 men were arrested in three groups within a space of three hours, and also when two others gave themselves up.

Some had been lying behind or under logs as the search for them at No Name Bay was conducted.

Offshore at the time were a freighter and a smaller, wooden-hulled vessel.

Sgt. Arvid L. Olafson of the RCMP said he went aboard the ship Samarkanda at 8:10 a.m. that day and found about 20 bales in a sling in the hold. One of them was subsequently brought to Victoria and he identified a 100-pound, jute-wrapped bale shouldered into the courtroom as one of those he found.

He also identified three plastic-wrapped samples of greenish plant material.

Among other things he seized from the ship were 18 passports, including 13 Colombian and one Nicaraguan; ship's Panamanian registration identifying it as the former Northern Light; charts, notes and an envelope with notations of pounds and values; lists of names and radio frequencies; airline tickets; unexposed rolls of film from which he made a selection of prints for exhibits; a diary, address book and ship's log; and $20,000 in U.S. $50 bills.

The airline tickets included some in the names of accused Stephen Johnson and William Perka, for flights between Seattle, Los Angeles, Guatemala City, Panama and Colombia.

There was also a Republic of Colombia tourist card in the name of Perka, Olafson said.

Crown counsel Gordon MacDonald said Perka and his counsel had agreed the diary, address book and some writing in the log is in Perka's hand.

Marijuana expert Dr. Arthur Cronquist, botanical taxonomist and senior scientist at the New York Botanical Garden, and an associate of previous expert witness Dr. Ernest Small, agreed with him that there is but one species of cannabis marijuana, no matter what criteria are used.

Cronquist said he knew of no one in the western world, aside from Dr. Richard E. Schultes and his associates, who consider cannabis ruderalis as a separate species.

During the development of the science of taxonomy there had been a tendency when something new was discovered to attach a new name when in doubt. In the U.S., said Cronquist, this had been interpreted by some as, "If it needed a name, call it a species."

That view is no longer held, he said.

Court was told an upcoming witness will be Dr. Schultes.

Yarwood elected

Mira Yarwood is the second woman to become president of Westcoast Savings Credit Union.

Others elected at the recent annual meeting were Rod Todd, vice-president, and Leila Muldrew, secretary.

Yarwood is the 15th president of the credit union's board of directors.

The first president was a woman, Constance Hudson, who served two terms.

Yarwood has been a director for 10 years, and has been secretary and vice-president.

Imperial Oil backs the opera

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. has announced it will be the principal supporter of the Canadian Opera Company Ensemble, a permanent resident company of eight Canadian singers and one conductor

Imperial's founding grant of $164,000 for four years will allow the company to form a full-time year-round professional corps for the first time.

Lotfi Mansouri, general director of the opera company, said world class singers born in Canada must go to Europe for their apprenticeship.

The Canadian Opera Company has been unable to offer full-time employment to singers and, he said, most are hired for 18 weeks a year. The resident ensemble is a first step toward changing the employment picture for singers.

Pioneer realtor funeral today

Funeral service for the son of a pioneer Victoria family was held in St. Columba Church today.

Roy Dunsterville Chandler, 94, died Friday in the Memorial Pavilion.

He was born Oct. 29, 1885 at Chandler House, at the corner of Menzies and Simcoe.

His father, John Chandler, designed and built the house which is now a restaurant with heritage status.

Chandler's parents came to Victoria in the mid-19th century.

His father was an accountant for the Husdon's Bay Company and his mother taught school for many years in the small building on Cedar Hill Cross Road that is now occupied by Sentinel School.

After his father's death, Chandler, his mother and brother Earl moved to a farm at Wilkinson and Roy Roads in Saanich. Roy and Dunsterville Roads are named after him.

Later, the two brothers went into real estate, becoming well-known in the Victoria area.

Chandler was one of the first Victoria men to enlist when the First World War broke out, going overseas with the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

He spent three years in a prisoner-of-war camp in the Ruhr Valley where the prisoners were forced to work in the coal mines. He escaped three times and was captured each time.

On his return to Victoria, he went back into real estate and in the 1920s began working as a logger, timber cruising around Vancouver Island. He married Marguerite Bennett in 1922.

He is survived by a son, Peter, of Comox; two daughters, Louise Bauer of Victoria and Daisy Stocker of Saanichton; nine grandsons, four granddaughters and one great-grandson.

Wardens to mark 50th

Canada's Junior Forest Wardens program is 50 years old.

The organization is for boys and girls from 10 to 16 years of age interested in wood lore, wildlife, conservation, fire fighting, communications, resource management and first aid.

To mark the anniversary locally, the Colwood-Langford group will stage a display in the Hillside shopping mall May 7-10 as part of National Forest Week.

Vancouver Island warden groups will be collecting old memorabilia, manuals, photographs to compile the history of the Junior Forest Wardens in B.C.

Anyone with such material or information should contact the wardens at 478-5655.

A disgruntled San Francisco husband has filed suit to get his estranged wife kicked out of school, saying her attempt to obtain another degree is frivolous. Douglas Page said his wife already has a master's degree and her pursuit of a second degree in English is useless. Society has no need for more people with advanced degrees in English, he said. "As a California taxpayer, I resent state funds being used for wasteful and duplicate education," he said in a Superior Court action. She has had six different majors but has yet to start working.

Prince Thibaut d'Orleans, youngest son of the pretender to the French throne, is in a southwestern French jail — accused of being an attempted burglar. Officials believe the 32-year-old prince is the "third man" in a bungled art theft. They have cheduled a court appearance for the handsome 6-foot, 2-inch prince on May 23 on charges of attempted burglary. It is the first time a member of the French royal family has been charged with a crime since King Louis XVI and his wife Marie Antoinette were imprisoned on charges of treason 183 years ago and later beheaded.

Hisao Onuki might almost wish he hadn't found the money. Now he's going to have to quit his job and go into hiding. The Tokyo truck driver found $420,000 in cash, and under Japanese law, as much as 20 per cent of it is his, even if it's claimed. But Onuki says life hasn't been the same since word got out. He's been beseiged by phone calls — some of them malicious — from people demanding a handout. He says he plans to take his windfall and disappear.

Robert Drinan, the only priest now serving in the U.S.Congress, announced that with "regret and pain" he will accept a papal order banning Roman Catholic clergy from political activity. But Father Bob Ogle, the only Roman Catholic priest in Canadian Parliament, says he has never heard of a reported church order that all priests withdraw from politics. Ogle (NDP-Saskatoon East) noted that Pope John Paul II urged priests to restrict their role in active politics during his visit to Mexico last summer but said he has heard nothing on the subject since then.

Dear Abby:

You told the mother of a 17-year-old boy who still sucked his thumb, "It's a harmless habit formed in infancy with provides the thumb sucker with a feeling of pleasure and gratification."

Thumb sucking is not always harmless. It can cause teeth to protrude, and in some cases it can cause the upper jaw to become deformed.

Some children who have sucked their thumbs in infancy escape without damaging their teeth or jaw formation, but if a child continues to suck his thumb after the age of 4, an orthodontist should be consulted.

Orthodontist

Dear Orthodontist:

Thank you for suggesting that a good rule of thumb to follow (excuse the pun) is: "Thumb sucking is harmless unless continued after the age of 4." Now let's hear it from a woman who's been at it for 36 years:

Dear Abby:

I can't resist writing in regard to the mother of a 17-year-old thumb sucker. I thought your answer was excellent. I wish I had had that reassurance years ago.

I am a 36-year-old mother of three, and I still suck my thumb! When I was a baby my mother would shove my thumb into my mouth as a pacifier to quiet me. Too late she realized I formed the habit of thumb sucking, and she did everything she could think of to stop me. She painted my thumb with iodine, bandaged it, and even strapped my hands to the bedpost at night. Nothing worked. Whenever I grew tired (even in high school) I'd suck my thumb. The kids teased me unmercifully, but even that didn't make me quit. I just became more skillful in hiding my habit.

After I was married I tried hiding it from my husband, but sleeping in the same bed made it impossible. Eventually he found out, but luckily it didn't matter one bit to him.

To this very day I can't fall asleep unless I have my thumb in my mouth.

My psychiatrist said it's harmless, but I'm curious. Am I the oldest thumb sucker on record?

Tacoma Reader

Dear Reader

If I hear from a thumb sucker over 36, I'll let you know.

Dear Abby:

A biologist wrote to say that animals are not less cruel within their species than humans. He submitted that ant colonies engage in warfare often to the death, as do baboons and other animals who fight fiercely for mates and territory. To support his theory you cited the praying mantis (female) who kills the male immediately after mating, then you added facetiously, "How's that for a lovely thank-you?"

Crash turns lifestyle around

EDMONTON (CP) — The February, 1978, crash of a Pacific Western Airlines Boeing 737 at Cranbrook, B.C., not only claimed the lives of 43 passengers and crew but also changed the lives of those who survived.

Kathleen Mailey was one of the six survivors, escaping almost miraculously with minor injuries. That was the physical damage. The crash didn't destroy Mailey's lifestyle but it changed it completely.

"I formed a plan to have another look at my lifestyle," the Calgary woman said in her first interview since the disaster.

"I sold everything. I sold my house, my car. I wanted to turn my life around."

Turning her life around meant quitting her job of seven years, travelling thousands of miles in search of a new lifestyle, establishing herself in a new city and a new job, and making a commitment to participate more in life.

Even now, talking about the crash makes her shake a bit.

"I am overwhelmed by the one in a million chance of coming out of it alive. I am really aware of how tentative life is; of how one minute you exist and the next minute you don't."

Mailey was living in Whitehorse before the crash and had been attending a para-legal course in Calgary. She decided on the spur of the moment to fly to Cranbrook, which had the closest airport to her parents who lived in Robson, B.C.

Astoundingly, she said, she was clearly forewarned that the plane would crash.

Before leaving Calgary, she visited a friend whom she described as "intuitive."

"Just before I left, she said to me 'Kathy, go to the back of the plane.' Then she laughed and said she didn't know why she said that.

"When I got on the plane, it was half-empty and there were seats everywhere. But I heard her words and I went to the third seat from the back of the plane."

When the plane crashed, the tail section broke off right in front of her feet. All survivors were seated in the back of the plane.

Later, her friend recalled a dream in which the tail had dropped off a plane, she said.

Mailey said she was aware the plane was going to crash after it aborted a landing, but did not have time for fear.

"There was just time enough to think 'I wonder what it's like to die.' "

When the plane hit the ground, she saw the two men sitting in front of her "just disappear" in a curtain of flame. She quickly unbuckled her seat belt and ran away from the tail section with another passenger.

"I was all bruised and everything. I seized up after."

Mailey was treated overnight in hospital for minor injuries. Some of her hair was singed and she still goes to a physiotherapist for treatment of a back sprain.

Two weeks later, she was back on the job at a Whitehorse law firm.

"I have a philosophy that you always get on with living, no matter what. That was my first reaction, to get back to work and back to normal as soon as possible."

Getting back to normal meant avoiding media interviews and immediately filing her report of the accident to investigators, a chore other survivors left until later.

It also meant a quick legal settlement. Mailey is the only survivor to have made a settlement. Extensive lawsuits are still under way by some claimants. She settled for a modest sum.

"I figured out my expenses and doubled them for the trauma."

Her lawyer wanted her to sue for much more.

But it was a survival technique for her, a way of putting the incident in the past, of getting on with the present.

"Vengeance stops your life," she said, adding that she would probably feel differently had she lost a limb or a loved one.

At first, Mailey thought of the crash constantly during her waking hours, although she was spared nightmares. But she made a point of expressing her feelings about it to friends and family and feels that helped her come to terms with it.

She described herself as a workaholic who always enjoyed long hours. But after the accident, she found herself questioning the work ethic for the first time. She also began to think that she should start doing some of the things she had always wanted to do.

It took a year to reach that point. Then she sold her home in Whitehorse, put her teenage daughter Maureen in school in Calgary and left for Barbados to see what a "laid-back society" was like.

It was great — for four months. Then she was anxious to come back to Alberta and the work ethic.

Does she still fly?

"Yes, but I don't like it. I don't take tranquillizers any more because they didn't help."

Following the disaster, she flew back to Whitehorse and said the flight was a traumatic experience.

Before going to Barbados, she heard of a plane crash in the east and immediately cancelled her flight plans.

"I took the bus from Reno to Miami. If the bus had gone across the ocean, I would have taken it."

In February, she flew on a PWA 737 airbus to Edmonton and found herself taking the same seat as she had on the Cranbrook flight.

She has spurned any moves to keep her in touch with other survivors, and rejected a plan by a fellow passenger to cash in on their experience by writing about it.

"I didn't want to make the airline pay or anyone else," she said. "I have an attitude of gratitude. Here I have my life."

Biofeedback an exciting new concept

By Dr. L.L. COLEMAN

Can you explain "biofeedback" to me? A friend of mine thinks that I would lose weight and stop smoking if I tried it.

Miss K.P.E.

Dear Miss E.:

"Biofeedback" is an exciting new concept by which people are given a better awareness of the processes that go on deep inside of them. In some people it can show how body functions can be related to their emotional well-being.

The electro-encephalograph machine that is used in biofeedback is an electronic device. It is attached to the scalp and can pick up electrical activity in the brain. The procedure is entirely safe and painless.

Those who are highly trained in the interpretation of brain waves have for years been able to interpret special markings in the graph. Brain tumors, epilepsy, and a wide variety of neurological diseases have been diagnosed by the EEG and the printed record it produces.

Biofeedback has been extended to the study of bodily processes that are not normally under one's complete control. With biofeedback training, people can attain levels of tranquility and relaxation that might otherwise be impossible.

Those who are enthusiastic about biofeedback have tried it to combat alcoholism, to alleviate severe emotional tensions, to relieve bouts of migraine, asthma, and even stomach ulcers. It is said that some with high blood pressure also benefit.

Whether or not the biofeedback process can help you lose weight or give up tobacco is speculative. If you have been unsuccessful with other routine methods, it might be worth a try.

Dear Doctor:

Is it right for someone who is not trained to interpret dreams to do so at parties? My friend plays a game at it and scares people to death.

Miss. C.P.

Dear Miss P.:

Some parlor games are a threat to emotional tranquility. Hypnosis is one of them. The interpretation of dreams is another.

I think it is exceedingly unfair for a "dream interpreter" to play such a game. He may be doing so without really being aware of the impact he makes on the tender psyches of those who surround him.

Fears and anxieties may be insinuated into the minds of people who are already sensitized by their own problems. Long after the parlor game is finished, these implanted anxieties and fears may flourish and become exaggerated and cause tremendous concern.

'Age of realism' shows in fashion

By SUSAN REYNOLDS
Christian Science Monitor

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.— Spring 1980 heralds the age of realism among California designers. The fantasy dressing of the '70s is part of a bygone era. Inflation and monetary strains have made investment dressing the byword for the '80s.

California designers interpret this sensible approach to fashion through multiseasonal clothes. They are using simple designs, durable fabrics and basic colors to create clothes that wardrobe a woman for several seasons.

California designer Wayne Chance calls the new fashions "practical, affordable and usable. The clothes today are understandable," he emphasizes.

Chance likes cotton and cotton weaves for spring and summer. He also prefers pants to skirts, and everything is easy fit. His pants are side-button pleats or pull-on baggy, and they are matched with silk-screened T-shirts or sleeveless gauze blouses.

Nancy Stolkin uses flexibility as her byword. "Clothes should be good for several seasons. Fashion is not as trendy today. Clothes should be worn as long as the fabric holds up. Therefore, clothes must be more simplified in terms of style and color and flexible as to where they can be worn," she says.

Stolkin likes soft, circular skirts, T-shirt chemises, sundresses with cardigans and baggy pants. To add interest she uses color blocks, sweetheart necklines, bias wrap tops and maillots. "I love an exaggerated V-back maillot with a pull-on circle skirt for a very today look. In fact, maillots have replaced T-shirts," she notes.

Another designer, Christine Albers, is using plastics to create a "high tech" 1980s look. She likes a plastic jumpsuit, but she also believes in investment dressing.

Albers too has offered a lot of pants, some skirts and only one chemise dress. Her key shape in A-line, which chiefly means shirts that are slim at the top or one-shoulder tops and pants that flare out at the bottom.

She likes midcalf pants, which she calls "cropper pants." Her longer pants flare out above the ankle. All of her designs are "clean, decorative designs," such as black and white combinations that create a geometric effect.

Meanwhile, Irene Tsu for the It Company likes the look of shorter chemises, especially with stand-up "Chinese" collars that can be worn up or down. Worn loosely, the chemise is slimmer and more classic but still a relative to the sack dress.

Boy zips through childhood

TORONTO (CP) — When Kenneth Gordon was three years old he got his first microscope and six months later he was reading books like Black Beauty.

When he started school at four "we had to fight like the dickens to get him in that early," said his mother, Linda.

He spent one month in kindergarten; 26 days in Grade 2 and then started doing Grades 3 and 4 together.

Kenneth, who speaks French and English and is studying Russian and Chinese, now is taking an accelerated program for gifted children and his mother figures he will hit university about age 14.

Mrs. Gordon and her husband, Ronald, have no special training in education but they taught their three children, using common sense and an aptitude for turning learning into play.

Mrs. Gordon said it isn't difficult and it can work with most children but takes time — and a little money for books and educational toys.

Anyone could do it but few parents are willing to expend the effort — or are unwilling to risk balanced social and emotional development.

"About all that most parents of young children look for is a day-care centre with a television set and a pot of macaroni," she said. "They simply don't want to be bothered."

There is increasing evidence that what parents do with their children in early childhood — especially during the first three years — can either improve or diminish both intelligence and chances for success.

Dr. Burton L. White, an expert on the development of human intelligence and director of the Centre for Parent Education in Newton, Mass., feels strongly about that school of thought.

"We like to believe that there's always hope, that it's never too late, that there's always room for improvement I believe that is a myth and that we hold that view in the face of increasingly strong evidence that it is too late.

"There is always the possibility of change. But the fact is that as the child gets older, remedial change becomes progressively more difficult and less likely to succeed."

A researcher in eary childhood development disagrees.

Dr. William Fowler of the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education in Toronto said he thinks White "is too pessimistic."

"I can't agree that age three is the cut-off point and there is no significant improvement possible after that point," Fowler said.

"But certainly the time to begin working is during the first three years; even infants at six months of age are ready to begin learning and in fact will make significant gains given the proper environment."

As part of his research, Fowler, with the help of the Canadian Mothercraft Society, ran a day-care program for infants, some as young as two months old, none older than 30 months.

The essence of Fowler's method was stimulation. The program lasted 15 months and the results were impressive. The average increase in intelligence, as measured by a battery of standard tests, was 20 points.

Some of the children gained as much as 40 points. They also showed gains in such areas as persistence and inquisitiveness.

Fowler's personal experience was no less convincing. He taught his daughter to read at age two.

Belt beef belted up

NEW YORK (UPI) — A federal judge ruled Tuesday that a belt buckle's purpose is to help keep one's pants or skirt up, and no amount of fancy work can make it a work of art eligible for copyright protection.

U.S. District Judge Gerard Goettel dismissed a copyright infringement complaint that Barry Kieselstein-Cord, the designer of two buckles called Winchester and Vaquero, filed against Accessories By Pearl Inc.

"Although Kiesselstein-Cord asserts the buckles are jewelry or sculpture," Goettel said, "they appear to be primarily belt buckles ... utilitarian objects designed to fasten belts and thus hold up or in a dress, skirt or pants.

"Even if we argree that his designs are particularly pleasing, that does not exalt their status as belt buckles," the judge said.

In order to qualify for copyright protection, the artistic features of a utilitarian object must be "separately identifiable and capable of existing independently as a work of art."

"The court," Goettel continued, "does not see in these buckles pictorial, graphic or sculptural features that can be idenfified separately from and are capable of existing independently of the utilitarian aspects of the buckles."

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD Shontyl McNeil of Eastwood elementary school in Windsor, Ontario, struggles with her emotions as she watches a the progress of a teammate as she goes through her routine on the balance beam during action Tuesday at All-Windsor Public School gymnastics meet at Centennial Secondary School. For a while, the routine went well. And then, as Shontyl shows on the right, her pal lost her balance and fell off the treacherous four-inch beam to the exercise mat.

Brisk, healthy routines give a wide-awake look looking good

By RENA PAUL

When I was hired as a receptionist I was told that my appearance was as important as my manners. So I dress well and apply make-up carefully every morning.

But by mid-afternoon I not only feel tired, I look tired — even if I touch up my make-up and drink gallons of strong coffee with lots of sugar.

Is there anything else I can do to perk me up at 3 p.m.? (I'm in good health — just had a check-up.)

Janine W.

Dear Janine:

The solution may lie in your lunch time: Leave your desk.

Get some fresh air, go for a brisk walk, swim, skate, join an exercise roup at the YW-YWCA, and once in a while listen to a concert in the park.

And don't forget to eat a light but nutritious lunch, that includes green salad, fruit and wholegrain break but no French fries or gooey pastry and no alcohol.

At 3 p.m. try to get a few deep breaths of fresh air — just stand by the window if there is one.

Do some stretching exercises: breath in as you rise on your toes and reach towards the ceiling, breath out as you relax and fold from the waist like rag doll.

Instead of coffee try fruit juice, yogurt or milk, an apple or orange or a rye cracker with cheese and celery.

A hot towel pressed against the face before reapplying make-up often has a revitalizing effect.

Good luck. Let me know what works for you.

Dear Rena:

Have you ever heard of a woman with hair on her breasts?

I have 5 or 6 hairs growing around each nipple and I feel like a freak.

What can I do?

T.Y.

Dear T.Y.:

Relax! It's quite common.

But if the hairs really bother you, don't try to pluck them or use removing creams on this sensitive area but ask your doctor for advice,

It might help you to know that in Europe hairs on a woman's breast are often considered "piquant." (Piquant = "having a lively arch charm," "engaging provocative" — according to Webster.)

Dear Rena:

We have two teenagers who seem to have gone "wash your hair every night" crazy.

Is it unhealthy to wash your hair seven days a week?

Florence S.

Dear Florence:

The quick answer to your question would be a definite Yes.

Most professionals feel that washing two or three times a week is enough.

In special cases where you are exposed to excessive dirt it may be necessary for an extra wash or two.

By overwashing, hair can be damaged, along with your scalp if harsh shampoos are used.

Apart from romance, you can overdo just about everything . . . including hair washing.

'Help children now'

TORONTO (CP) — Worried that your child is developing slowly, falling behind others the same age?

Don't wait for him or her to grow out of it.

Help can be more effective when started early, even under a year of age, says pediatrician Katerina Haka-Ikse, head of the Hospital for Sick Children's early childhood developmental clinic.

Unfortunately, most youngsters aren't brought in for assessment until they are three, when it becomes increasingly obvious that they are falling behind their playmates, she said.

"When a child is very young, parents somehow believe its main task is to move."

Yet infants and toddlers should be developing in many ways; movement is only part of the story.

"At any age, the signs for alarm would be a child who does not fix his eyes and follow with his eyes," Dr. Haka-Ikse said. "They do this very early, even in the first two or three weeks of life, at moments when the mother is face to face with the child.

"At least sometimes she should see the child watching her, if he's in his crib and she moves."

Other signs parents should watch for are a failure to make sounds, to get excited, to hear noises, to be interested in toys, to reach and grasp, to differentiate between parents and other people and to show much movement.

"These are general enough to apply to any age level," she said.

Dr. Haka-Ikse assesses a child to determine its individual strengths and weaknesses.

Then she may observe the mother or sometimes the whole family to see how they relate to the child. Sometimes, with the parent's knowledge, she watches the family at play with the youngster through a one-way mirror.

If there is a developmental problem, she works out a strategy with the parent to improve the situation and bring the child to its full potential.

Mothers frequently bring in children whom they describe as "bad," she said. "They say, 'He can walk or talk but he doesn't want to.' "

She doesn't believe children are "born bad" but there are children who are "born different."

"The saddest thing is to see children who have ability but are not allowed to be different."

Dr. Haka-Ikse said she would like to see improvements to help parents cope with their children.

"Schools should have courses in parenting in junior high," she said. "In London, Ont., as an experiment, they are trying to integrate a day-care centre into a high school.

"It gives students a chance to see what it means to look after a baby. It's not the ideal — babies cry, they need to be changed. But it may prepare young people to be better parents."

Dr. Haka-Ikse said more high-quality day care is needed.

"There are some excellent day-care centres where I wouldn't hesitate to place my child, but others are appalling; they provide no stimulation.

"The other thing I would like to see is better prenatal preparation for parents. As soon as the young mother goes to an obstetrician, she should be linked to a system to prepare her and her husband for a child.

"The family doctor, in fact, should pick out parents who may not have necessary skills and see they have individual attention. If he cannot do this, he should refer them."

Pair plans stunt

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two U.S. college students will spend 28 days on their knees near Mt. Fuji, Japan, this summer setting up 250,000 dominoes that they will then topple in 45 minutes — if an earthquake doesn't foil their plans.

"Basically we've been told we're insane," Erez Klein, 19, of Westport, Conn, said Monday.

"It's an inner drive to see the dominoes falling," said Klein, a student at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa.

The aim is to see how many dominoes in a vertical chain can be toppled without having to start again.

Blank filled in HALIFAX (CP) — Vicki Myers's mind went blank that day last June when she heard the bad news. She bought groceries, delivered a gift, drove home and couldn't remember a thing.

She had just been told her daughter Natasha, 2, had cystic fibrosis.

Today, Natasha is a happy, active child despite having to undergo daily treatment.

"When we were first told that Natasha might have cystic fibrosis, it was a big worry. We didn't know anything about cystic fibrosis and thought maybe it was fatal."

After two weeks of waiting, the original diagnosis was confirmed by a sweat test and three days later the Myers were in the office of Dr. Terry Gillespie, head of cystic fibrosis at the Izaak Walton Killam Hospital.

Natasha was admitted to the hospital the next day and her condition gradually started to improve.

"She had always been active, but in about May of 1979 (when the first symptoms began to show) she got really sick, coughing and throwing up mucus. She lost weight and weighed more at one year than she did at two."

After four weeks in hospital, Natasha gained weight. Two weeks later she came home.

"The real improvement came when she got home," Myers said. "We were able more easily to get her to take pills and to eat than when she was in hospital."

The Myers received special equipment to loosen the mucus in the lungs and a respirator to keep lung passages clean. Each day's treatment takes an hour.

"She doesn't like to sit still for 20 minutes wearing the respirator so we invent little games for her to play," her mother says.

Natasha is on a hefty pill regime. She takes nine to 12 pills with each meal.

The Myers say now that they have learned about cystic fibrosis, they have been able to accept Natasha's condition.

The life expectancy of cystic fibrosis children has not been firmly established, however, and it is possible they may have nearly full life with full treatment.

Containers tell a story

the collectors

By KEN RICHARDSON

The Victorians used boxes for everything and many of the colorful specimens around today are from that dynamic era. Connoisseurs tend to favor the porcelain kind, hand-painted or transfer printed with charming scenes. There is also a widespread interest in containers covered with the finest fabrics and designed to hold handkerchiefs, colars and gloves. Boxes were also made for hair grease, potted fish and even medicinal ointments; it is from this kind of packaging that another extremely popular collectable derives — pot lids, notably those put out by the English company named Pratt. Many of the boxes were quite plain or could bear the name and address of individual pharmacists; while the latter lacked embellishments they do tell a graphic story and reveal an interesting sidelight on the social history of the period. In England, whole industries owed their very existence and prosperity to the consuming fad for boxes. The famous enamels of Bilston and Battersea, marvels of artistic precision, offer fine examples of the work — not only in the usual round, oblong or square shapes but also in models of animals or birds. Tunbridge ware achieved fame because of the intricacy of the craftsmanship employed in the manufacture of boxes.

Flea markets, yes. Collector-dealers are often extremely knowledgeable and very helpful to new collectors. Auctions are another good source but check pre-lists carefully so you know what you are about.

Some of the items may be in mint condition, especially those made of paper, fabric or embroidery. Lots of other have survived reasonably well. Check for authenticity and insist on a full description on your bill of sale.

Princes range from $5 to $500. A Tunbridge ware box with fitted interior, circa 1860 is worth about $45; a Victorian footed ring box decorated with a mandolin, horn and music box $25; an oval Bride's Box decorated with a painted man and woman, $245.

Q. I have a photograph that resembles your description of a daguerrotype but the detail is quite faded. Can you comment? R.W.

A. Only one answer: it was exposed to excessive light for an extended period. A tragedy, really, since it has happened to so many otherwise sound specimens of the important collectable.

Q. Your evaluation of $175 on my early Edison phonograph seems on the short side. Would you revise? T.B.

A. The estimate I gave is approximately right as a calculated average.

Thugs, police rally to Ryan

MONTREAL (CP) — Thirty members of the Montreal police tactical squad were called to a high school in the working-class St. Henri district where Claude Ryan was speaking Monday night, after a group of local toughs began milling about the entrance.

One of the youths entered the auditorium — where Ryan and supporters of the federalist side were gathered for a referendum meeting — and shouted his support of the yes option before being hustled out, but police said there were no other incidents and no arrests.

"Things got hot," one officer said. But another added: "We have nothing to report."

The Quebec referendum campaign has taken on the appearance of a traditional, hard-fought provincial election race, complete with charges of dirty tricks from both sides.

The no forces kept alive charges the yes side is using fascist tactics as Fernand Lalonde, former Quebec solicitor-general, told no supporters the yes side's habit of heaping contempt on federalists had totalitarian overtones.

But Ryan shied away from the controversial "fascist" debate.

Taking another tack, he criticized supporters of sovereignty for glorifying the values of a nation state to the detriment of individual and minority rights.

But Premier Rene Levesque didn't let the dirty tricks affair drop and he accused the Liberal leader and his supporters of being a bunch of accident-prone "crybabies" as he made public the yes committee's list of 58 alleged acts of violence and intimidation by the no side.

To match Ryan's complaints during the last two weeks of defaced posters, anonymous threats, garbage dumped on lawns, even possible arson, Levesque countered with reports of incidents of slashed tires, a telephoned death threat to one man and mentioned that that man had also been told his daughter would be raped.

The yes committee also alleged that an eight-year-old in Montreal was hired to pull down yes posters and banners for $5 for each.

New rules for radiation

OTTAWA (CP) — Legislation designed to stiffen the laws controlling the amount of radiation from a piece of equipment, be it a dental x-ray or a microwave oven, was introduced in the Commons Monday.

The bill would reduce the amount of sound waves or electomagnetic waves permitted in television receivers, dental x-ray equipment, microwave ovens, baggage inspection x-ray devices and laser devices.

The legislation, an amendment to a bill passed in 1972, prohibits the importation, sale or lease of any radiation-emitting device which creates a risk of genetic or personal injury, impairment of health or death from radiation.

Funds 'syphoned', Kierans quits post

MONTREAL (CP) — Eric Kierans, a former Liberal provincial and federal cabinet minister, has resigned from the board of directors of the Quebec agency that handles the province's $10-billion pension fund and accused Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau of siphoning off money from the fund to finance the province's administrative deficit.

Kierans, a member of the no committee opposing sovereignty-association in the current referendum campaign, said in an interview that his resignation had nothing to do with that campaign.

In his letter of resignation to Premier Rene Levesque Monday, Kierans said the "growing interference of the finance (department) in the Caisse de Depot et Placement du Quebec . . . has become intolerable.

"Upper management can no longer establish balanced and diversified investment policies nor assure the best possible return on its assets of $10 billion," said Kierans, an economics professor at McGill University.

Kierans said that Parizeau "expected the Caisse to lend $1.5 billion to the government and to Hydro-Quebec in 1980, or 83 per cent of the fund's projected increase . . . and at preferential interest rates.

"The Caisse is being called on to subsidize the state," Kierans said.

"It's flagrant exploitation of its contributors. If we spend the funds for constitutional adventures, we'll have to expect that the comfortable retirement the contributors are paying for will not be possible, except by the goodwill of others in years to come."

He said he started thinking of resigning after the provincial budget was presented on March 25, "because of decisions such as those to accord preferential rates to Quebec bonds."

This was unacceptable considering Quebec's weak economy and higher government deficit compared with that of Ontario, he said.

No winnings for her ex

MONTREAL (CP) — A woman who won $500,000 in a provincial lottery four years ago does not have to share the winnings with her estranged husband in the wake of a Superior Court judgment Monday.

In rejecting an attempt by Claude Guenette to seize the assets of his wife Isabelle Giguere after suing her for separation, Mr. Justice Edouard Martel noted the husband paid no part of the five-dollar Quebec Super-Loto ticket.

Guenette also failed to prove that his wife ever intended to share the windfall, the judge said.

The ruling came after Ms. Giguere filed a counter-action for separation and asked the court to annul most of her husband's seizures.

Plane crash ignites forest

The Canadian Press

A fire was raging out of control through 1,000 acres (405 hectares) of forest in the Cold Lake air weapons range of Saskatchewan late Monday following the crash of a U.S. Air Force plane earlier in the day, a spokesman for the Saskatchewan fire service said.

The fire was the second caused by the crash of a plane participating in a joint U.S.-British-Canadian military exercise in the area.

Two U.S. airmen were killed last Thursday when their fighter went down on the Alberta side of the range, which straddles the two provinces, and sparked a fire that now covers 10,000 acres. However, the pilot of the second aircraft bailed out before the crash.

The joint U.S.-British-Canadian military exercise was suspended following the plae crash.

Capt. David Kendall, information officer at Canadian Forces Base Cold Lake, said Exercise Maple Flag will be suspended today and possibly Wednesday pending a review of the crashes.

A third fire in the range has consumed about 100,000 acres in the Wapiti Lake area of Saskatchewan and was still out of control late Monday.

Alberta forestry officialy report 51 forest fires were burning throughout the province Monday, four of them out of control. The largest — started almost two weeks ago by a dry lightening strike — is burning about 190 kilometres north of Fort McMurray and has grown to about 320,000 acres.

A forestry spokesman said 1980 could be the worst fire season in Alberta's history. About 474,000 acres have burned so far this year.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You learn what superiors expect of you. Goals are clarified. Duties and opportunities come into focus. Gemini, Sagittarius and Aquarius persons play significant roles. A change "for the better" occurs. Gain indicated through written word.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Good Moon aspect coincides now with long-range plans, travel — you also could restore relationship with family member. Taurus, Libra natives figure prominently. What was out-of-reach becomes available. You could be richer as result!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Meanings are obscured — and so are financial statements. Strive for clarity. Gain cooperation from one close to you, including partner or mate. Get accounting, check invoices and inventory. Pisces, Virgo and the number 7 figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on special efforts to reach more people with political and other special information. Link arms with one who shares interest, dedication and zeal. Be aware of potential and legal limitations. A relationship "heats up."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): One who leans or depends on you confides yet another problem. In this case, patience may not be virtue. Means know when to draw line. Put a halt to unnecessary burdens and make clear that you do have a life of your own to live.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Spotlight on creativity, affair of heart, speculation, children, new starts in new directions and a chance to be more independent in thought, action. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure in scenario. You feel revitalized and could fall in love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dig deep, secure position, establish "territorial rights." Intuition is sharply-honed. You "wake up" with answers. Sense of direction is defined. You not only know where to go, but you know what to do when destination is reached.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Break free from restrictions. Accent fresh contacts, social activity, communication, education and travel. Holiday spirit prevails — you feel free and there could be valid reason for celebration. Display versatility and humor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Run a "tight ship" where money is concerned. Be positive of values. Obtain valid appraisal. Be willing to review, revise and rebuild. Check details, especially fine print. A hidden clause could be made to work to your benefit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Check Sagittarius message. Be flexible, ready for change, travel and a variety of experiences. Member of opposite sex figures prominently. Judgment is on target — you will be at right place at right time. Be direct and confident.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid sensationalism. Maintain moderate, steady pace. Accent diplomacy, be aware of "hidden values." Taurus, Libra, Scorpio individuals play significant roles. Major domestic adjustment is part of your personal scenario.

IF MAY 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY compared to last year, you are free-and-easy — opportunities increase, social life accelerates, there is more chance for travel, education, publishing and communication. You have resolved a "family situation" which acted as if an emotional anchor, dragging you at times to depths of despair. You have, however, recovered. You are a survivor. May could be your most memorable month of 1980. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You are sensuous, spiritual and possess extrasensory perception. You are a perfectionist and integrity is second nature to you.

CLC delegates duck Que. row

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian union delegates decided Monday against holding a fresh discussion of the May 20 Quebec referendum at the national convention of the Canadian Labor Congress here.

This headed off at least one debate expected to aggravate divisions within the 2.3-million-member labor organization.

The congress decided instead to settle for a reaffirmation of its support for the province's right to self-determination.

The vote on the resolution came after a short debate, which left even Quebec Federation of Labor president Louis Laberge standing in line waiting unsuccessfully to speak on the subject.

Only two weeks before the convention, the QFL overwhelmingly voiced its support for a yes vote in the sovereignty-association referendum.

But Laberge seemed satisfied with the congress's decision to restate its 1978 stand on Quebec, a policy recommended by CLC president Dennis McDermott in his opening address earlier in the day.

McDermott urged delegates not to re-open debate on Quebec and said "nothing could be gained by re-debating or rehashing the issue."

The policy also says that regardless of the outcome of the referendum, "we, the workers of both French-speaking and English-speaking Canada reassert our commitment to maintain powerful bonds of solidarity in our unions."

The Quebec debate was seen as the first test for the congress, which still faces a number of potentially divisive debates before the convention ends Friday.

Opening lead — king of hearts.

It is said that the mark of a good card player is his ability to guess two-way finesses for queens. Undoubtedly this is a good criterion of a player's skill, but an even better gauge is one's ability to eliminate guesswork for queens by substituting an entirely different and more sound approach to the problem.

Here is a typical case, where West leads a heart against six clubs. Without the heart lead, the slam would be ice-cold even if declarer misguessed the location of the queen of diamonds. But with it, South must mind his p's and q's or he may not come out whole.

Instead of torturing himself with trying to find a clue to the location of the missing damsel, South should plan the play from an altogether different aspect.

What he should do, after winning the heart with the ace, is draw two rounds of trumps, cash three top spades, discarding a heart from dummy, and play the jack of hearts.

Once he does this, South can place his cards face up on the table and claim six. West wins the heart with the queen but is at the end of his rope. He must either return a diamond, thus relieving South of the guess for the queen, or return a spade or a heart, either of which permits declarer to ruff in dummy as he discards a diamond from his hand.

It is true that South relinquishes all chance of making seven by adopting this craven method of play, but the guaranteed result — bidding and making a vulnerable slam — far outweighs the importance of a problematical overtrick.

39 PERSONALS

THERE MUST BE MANY very lovely, lonely, hesitant ladies out there who long for affection and who are unsatisfied. I only desire one for an intimate, lasting, meaningful daytime personal relationship. I am a clean living, intelligent, considerate and mature middle-aged gentleman. Please don't be shy, answer this ad. Discretion positively assured. Victoria Press Box 640.

IS THERE A MALE "10" IN Victoria? I'll settle for as low as a "7" based on attitude more than physical looks, although looks could be worth an extra 3 points. I'm a youthful mid 30's. Deffinate 8, maybe 9 combining appearance and mental outlook. Enjoy most all of life and would like to meet someone who shares these feelings. Victoria Press Box 671.

SINCERELY ON THE LOOKout for amiable female companion, thirtyish to fortyish to attend baseball games, long walks, theatre etc. Pleasant companionship urgently required by long Victorian resident, early forties. Victoria Press Box 578.

God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon his love had given
And though the body slumbers here
The soul is safe in heaven.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

308 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank our relatives, friends and neighbors for their sympathy and acts of kindness during our recent loss of our husband and father, Willem, and to those who donated to the Cancer Fund. Special thanks to Doctors, A. Nyhof and John Hough, the Staff of the Cancer Day Care Clinic, the nurses of Royal Jubilee Hospital, friends and coworkers at the mill and to McCall Bros. Funeral Directors. — Mrs. Sophia Scholtens and family

THE FAMILY OF THE LATE Mrs. Barbara E. Peck wish to express their deepest appreciation to friends for their many kindnesses in the loss of a dear mother, daughter, sister, grandmother and aunt. Special thanks to Dr. Sargent, the nurses of second floor south wing, Royal Jubilee hospital, Rev. Dr. Kenneth King, Mr. and Mrs. S.E. Clark and Hayward's Thompson and Irving Funeral Home.

309 IN MEMORIAM

JIGGINS — In loving memory of Mable Lillian who passed away on May 4, 1978.
To hear her voice, to see her smile
To sit and talk to her awhile
To be together in the same old way
Would be our dearest wish this day.
—Always remembered with love and affection by her loving husband, Fred; her son and daughter in-law, Mick and Joan; her grandchildren, Chris, Susan, Kim, Angela and Patrick; also Janice, Kelly and Joseph and her great-grandchildren, Aaron, Adrian, Nichole and Marc. God bless you grandma.

Strawberries and fertilizers

gardening

A reader is questioning the advice given last June or early July in this column regarding the fertilizing of the selections of wild Alpine strawberries of which 'Baron Solemacher' was the first introduction and very popular with local home gardeners at that time. Other selections are also available now in seed displays.

The wild Alpine strawberries are different to the large hard seeded berries grown for processing locally, which need quantities of sugar added to the juice to cut tartness.

The Puget Beauty, or selections, is most popular for the processors who find the solid berries make fine juice from which the large hard seeds are easily strained, and the tartness can be lessened by adding quantities of sugar, rather high amounts compared with today's findings that sweeter berries and less sugar are more desirable.

It was recommended in the column last summer that the Alpine selections, which bear small sweet fruits claimed by some to be the true wild strawberry flavor and excellent for processing, that a 6-8-6 or 5-10-5 fertilizer mix, one with the first and third figures the same and the middle figure about double, be applied as the plants form flowers and fruits, at a rate of one-teaspoonful to a plant applied each side of the row at a distance of about 10 cm.

The nitrogen maintains good growth in hot weather, the potash hardens the cells of that growth, and the high potassium (superphosphate) increases root growth and increases the formation of all edible berries, root vegetables of better quality, and edible seeds (beans, for example).

The Alpine strawberry plants in the home garden are well watered with a trickling hose at the roots of each plant, the fertilizer applied each side of the row, then lightly moistened with a fine hose spray to dissolve the crystals. The next day another heavy watering is applied to soil around the plant roots to wash the dissolved nutrients down to and below root level. The roots will pick up what nutrients they can handle as the solution goes down, and obtain more, if needed, as surface cultivation draws the solution back to the surface in hot weather.

So much for the advice given in the column on fertilizing Alpine strawberries last summer.

The reader has now been told by a Saanich Peninsula strawberry farmer that no nitrogen fertilizer of any kind should be used in a strawberry field. He referred to the 10 years of tests made at the Federal Experimental Station in Saanichton in the early 30's which proved beyond doubt that all test plots which received nitrogen in any form (even farmyard or horse manure before setting out the plants), made poorer growth and produced far less berries compared to plots treated with potash only, Phosphoric acid (super-phosphate in those days) did improve the texture, and flavor of the processing berries then in favor (Seattle Puget Beauty).

The Saanichton Experimental Station staff had always worked on strawberry pests and diseases, and grew the plants for the strawberry farmers, quite convinced the Saanich selection of Puget Beauty, so popular with berry processors, would be good here because of the good reports on 10 years of experimenting in coastal Washington and Oregon with the original selection made at the U.S.D.A. station at Puallyp.

A severe winter here and in Washington a few years later killed all the planted and planting stocks, but these were soon replaced because of ability of the selection to withstand the cold of normal winters on the West Coast.

Going back to the reader's doubts as to using a general garden fertilizer containing nitrogen on strawberries during the flowering and fruiting season.

The strawberry farmer was correct in saying it would cause soft rank growth in the field, and that the plants would be killed when the straw, which is laid under the plants and between the rows to keep the berries clean and make it an easier place for pickers to kneel on, was flash fired after the crop was picked.

It would appear our reader had not explained he was growing an Alpine selection of wild strawberries and not a selection approved for strawberry processors.

The Alpine selections are a different breed of strawberries. They do not produce runners, the foliage remains close to the ground, and the small fruits are held high above the foliage and continue producing over a long period, sometimes to frost in home gardens sheltered from heavy fall rains, fall gales, or early fall frosts.

The culture of the Alpine selections in the home garden remains the same as advised when the first Alpine selection (Baron Solemacher) became available in seed packets some 25 years ago. We experimented here in our fruit nursery and sold thousands of plants to gardeners, some of whom by selection of the seedlings, now have large heavy producing plantings of these Alpine selections.

Raid-victim bodies headed to U.S.

By The Canadian Press

The bodies of the U.S. servicemen killed in the aborted hostage rescue attempt in Iran were headed home today, 11 days after the mission collapsed in fiery failure in the eastern Iranian desert.

The remains were transferred to U.S. custody on arrival in Zurich, Switzerland, aboard a regular Swissair flight from Tehran. They then were placed aboard a U.S. Air Force C-141 transport plane that took off for Dover Air Force Base, Del.

U.S. officials say eight men died in the Iran mission, but the Iranians have variously said nine or 10 bodies had been recovered.

The transfer of the remains took place in a document-signing ceremony at a Zurich airport hangar.

Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capudji, who accompanied the coffins from Tehran, formally transferred the remains to Swiss government and International Red Cross officials, who then passed them on to U.S. Ambassador Richard Vine.

Before boarding the morning Swissair flight, Capudji conducted a brief religious ceremony as the bodies were about to be loaded on to the aircraft.

Washington has said only eight bodies were left behind at the eastern Iranian desert site where the rescue mission was cancelled; Iranian authorities say they have found 10 bodies there.

However, nine coffins were placed aboard the Swissair flight.

The U.S. government refused to discuss the procedure to be followed in transferring the bodies, apparently fearing that if much was made of its part in the matter Ayatollah Khomeini's anti-American government might cause further delays.

But it was expected that the Red Cross will deliver the bodies to the U.S. government, and the defence department will return them to the families of the men after they were identified and prepared for burial in accordance with military regulations.

The Americans were killed April 25 when a helicopter sliced into a C-130 transport as the U.S. force was withdrawing from a desert landing strip 320 kilometres east of Tehran after the decision to abort the attempted rescue of the 53 Americans who today began their 185th day as hostages in Iran.

In Washington, Col. Charles Beckwith, commander of the disastrous raid, said if the U.S. can locate the hostages in Iran, another military raid should be tried to free them.

Beckwith's recommendation came Monday during three hours of secret testimony before the House of Representatives armed service committee.

"He just said he felt that if we could find out where the hostages were, we should go back in and pick them up," Representative Samuel Stratton (Dem.—N.Y.) said after the hearing.

Stratton said Beckwith testified that the mission had to be aborted because, with only five helicopters, 15 to 18 of his 97 commandos would had to have been left behind.

Meanwhile, Britain is reported to have warned President Carter against using military force against Iran.

Lord Carrington, the British foreign secretary, emphasized the British view in a 20-minute meeting with Carter Monday in Washington that military steps would be extremely dangerous, British sources said.

The sources said Carrington reiterated British support for economic and diplomatic steps against Iran, despite some doubts that they will work.

The British, along with the rest of the European Economic Community and Japan, have agreed to impose the sanctions, which include an almost-total trade ban, unless the U.S. hostages in Iran are released by May 17.

Saudi adopts $250B plan

BEIRUT (AP) — King Khaled of Saudi Arabia has started his country's third five-year development plan, to cost $250 billion — or $41,000 for every man, woman and child in the desert monarchy, Saudi radio announced in a broadcast monitored in Lebanon.

An additional $50 billion has been put aside as an "inflation factor," the broadcast said Sunday. That brings to $300 billion the total expenditures foreseen under the plan — or $50,000 per capita.

The big spending often exceeds the annual operational budget, which is $46 billion this year. Saudi Arabia has a population of 7.5 million and earns $91 billion a year from oil sales.

The previous five-year plan, supposed to cost $142 billion, was outpaced by inflation, forcing the government to add $60 billion.

It, like the first plan, was aimed at developing the country's basic facilities — roads, schools, hospitals and transportation. But the new one will favor development of productive projects — with an emphasis on agriculture, the broadcast quoted Finance Minister Mohammed Balkhail as saying.

The oil industry accounts for more than 60 per cent of Saudi Arabia gross national product, and the private sector produces less than 20 per cent.

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest exporter of crude oil, has 113 billion barrels of proven oil reserves, produces crude at a daily rate of 9.5 million barrels, and nets about $91 billion a year from oil sales.

Greek PM has new role

ATHENS (Reuter) — Prime Minister Constantine Karamanlis was elected President of Greece on Monday and promptly resigned the premiership.

Caramanlis, 73, also resigned his parliamentary seat. He takes up his new five-year post June 20 succeeding Constantine Tsatsos.

The parliamentary members of Caramanlis's New Democracy party will meet Thursday to elect another leader who will have the task of forming a new administration, government spokesmen said.

Caramanlis is expected to be asked to remain as caretaker prime minister until a new government is formed.

He was the only candidate in Monday's election and drew 183 votes from the 300-member parliament from his own party, smaller parties and independents.

The 93 deputies from Greece's main opposition party, the Panhellenic Socialist Movement, refused to vote.

Big step to protect pandas

PEKING (UPI) — China has announced a major conservation move to try to save the giant panda from extinction.

The government said a sprawling 100,000-acre region of bamboo forest, ravines and high mountains in Sichuan province near the Tibet border has been designated a protected area for the panda and 25 other rare species.

The establishment of the Dafengding Natural Preservation follows a survey of the area by 100 scientists and agronomists who discovered not only colonies of pandas but also rare species of monkeys and deer.

How Juneau the time?

JUNEAU (AP) — Dozens of Juneau businesses are operating on Pacific Daylight Time this week — an hour later than the rest of the city — as a protest against to the recent switch of Juneau to Yukon time.

The U.S. federal department of transportation ordered Juneau and surrounding areas to switch to Yukon time last month.

Juneau had been on Pacific time, which is two hours later than other major Alaska centres.

After Washington ordered the time change, a special election was called and by a two-to-one ratio, voters said they were against changing time. But the transportation department refused to back down.

Host touchy over Somoza

ASUNCION (AP) — Former dictator Anastasio Somoza of Nicaragua has found a home in Paraguay. But many of his new neighbors regard him with a mixture of curiosity, suspicion and dislike.

Leading newspapers have questioned the wisdom of President Alfredo Stroessner in granting Somoza asylum following his ouster by leftist Sandinista guerrillas in a civil war that ended almost 50 years of Somoza family rule.

Paraguay's tiny political opposition has used Somoza's presence to attack Stroessner's rightist regime, accusing it of giving refuge to a "fugitive despot" and of granting the Nicaraguan privileges it permits few Paraguayans.

The Asuncion newspaper Hoy recently launched a virulent attack on Somoza, publishing daily editorials accusing him of violating Paraguayan hospitality and strongly suggesting that he go elsewhere. The editorials were halted abruptly, apparently on orders from the interior ministry.

Somoza, who announced on arrival that he planned to stay for only "a few months," has shown no sign that he is ready to leave. He recently bought 19,200 acres of state land in the undeveloped Chaco area of western Paraguay and let it be known that he plans to grow cotton and raise cattle.

He lives behind a two-metre brick wall in a spacious home on broad, tree-lined General Genes Avenue, 15 minutes from downtown Asuncion. Visitors are greeted at the heavy gate by a shirt-sleeved guard who politely advises, in Spanish with a Central American accent, that "the general is not available."

The 54-year-old Somoza is often seen, bodyguards in tow, at Asuncion's best restaurants and nightspots. He tips generously and has a taste for Russian vodka and attractive women. He travels freely around the country, presumably in search of investment opportunities, and occasionally invites influential Paraguayans to his home, but rarely attends official functions.

"Some of the military people like him, but many Paraguayans feel that it is damaging to Paraguay to have him here," said a Western diplomat. "His lifestyle is not approved of. He lives openly with a mistress. That is not to say that Paraguayans don't approve of mistresses, but here the emphasis is on preserving the family and upholding appearances."

Somoza and an estimated 30 relatives and aides arrived last Aug. 19 — after a brief stay in the United States and the Bahamas — aboard a chartered airliner from Guatemala reported to have cost $100,000. Interior Minister Sabino Montanaro said Somoza asked for temporary residence and the government, "loyal to its tradition of hospitality and non-interference in other countries' internal affairs" gave him a visa renewable every 90 days.

Pope in Kenya after charming Congo crowds

Times News Services

NAIROBI — Pope John Paul II brought his African pilgrimage to the staunchly Christian nation of Kenya today in hopes of fostering cooperation between the 2.9 million Catholics and the many Protestant sects that predominate in the former British colony.

The Pope was greeted by President Daniel Arap Moi, a devout member of the Protestant African Inland Church; Cardinal Maurice Otunga and tens of thousands of Kenyans waving the white-and-gold flag of the Vatican.

The Pope will spend two days in Kenya.

In a surprise move, President Godfrey Binaisa of neighboring Uganda flew into Nairobi just before the pope's arrival and President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, a Roman Catholic, was to arrived on Wednesday for the papal visit.

On Monday, the Pope had a triumphant visit to the Congo. At Kisingani, the former Stanleyville, he waved his hands in time to the wild music of his airport welcome and then received the cheers of villagers on the long drive into the city.

Earlier, in a 6½-hour visit to Brazzaville, capital of the Congo, almost half the city turned out for a singing, dancing welcome.

The Pope this week won from Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko an agreement to release four university students arrested April 24 when Mobutu, resisting student requests for reform, had closed the national university.

Congo President Denis Sassou-Nguesso, who only last month opened diplomatic relations with the Vatican as part of his effort to moderate the rigid Marxism of his country and open new links with the West, greeted the Pope with a warm embrace.

Bored teens try crime?

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — A teenage girl was arrested at her high school Monday, one of three 16-year-olds police believe are responsible for a string of crimes, including burglary and extortion.

Among the weapons police seized from the trio were a Thompson sub-machine-gun, and a .45-calibre pistol hung in a holster inside a school locker.

The girl and two boys were described by police as middle class, highly intelligent and bored. Police said they would be charged with delinquent conduct.

1979 air crash toll 871

MONTREAL (CP) — Aviation fatalities involving scheduled flights increased to 871 worldwide in 1979, from 755 in 1978, according to preliminary figures provided by some world airlines to the International Civil Aviation Organization.

Despite that toll, ICAO said Monday the 1979 safety level for scheduled passenger services was only slightly lower than in 1978.

The ratio of deaths to the volume of passengers rose to 0.10 per 100 million passengr kilometeres travelled, compared with 0.09 the previous year, the association said in a news release.

The number of fatal aircraft accidents per 100,000 hours flown increased to 0.22 from 0.18.

There were 31 fatal aircraft accidents in 1979 and 25 in 1978.

The ICAO statement noted that safety levels are significantly different for various types of aircraft flying scheduled routes.

Turbo-jet aircraft, which carry about 95 per cent of all passengers, were involved in eight accidents in 1979 and accounted for 640 deaths. Turbo-propeller and piston-engined aircraft were involved in 23 accidents that claimed 231 lives.

Those figures indicate the fatality rate for turbo-jet aircraft was far lower than for turbo-propeller craft, probably because turbo-jets are more reliable, their route patterns are different, and the operating environment usually is more favorable than for turbo-propeller aircraft.

Non-scheduled charter flights, including a sightseeing tour that crashed into Mount Erebus in Antarctica, killing 237 passengers and 20 crew members, accounted for 352 fatalities in 1979, four more than in the previous year.

While complete information on worldwide general aviation accidents is not available, ICAO members indicated there were at least 1,243 fatalities in 1979, compared with 1,723 in 1978.

Air traffic safety advances last year included improvement of the United States system of predicting potential problems in the flow of traffic with the help of a new computerized system.

The first of 27 long-range radar systems also became operational in the U.S.

Experiment fizzles

NORTH EAST, Md. (AP) — One student was admitted to hospital and 13 others were treated for burns when chemicals exploded after a science class experiment outside a North East school, authorities said Monday.

The other 12 were treated for minor burns.

A state fire investigator said the explosion occurred after the sixth grade class had completed an experiment with potassium and sulphuric acid on the lawn outside the school.

"The proper chemical reaction occurred," he said.

Street corner 'justice' in Uganda

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Mobs of Kampala residents have burned alive suspected criminals in grisly street corner justice — part of a wave of terror and crime apparently caused largely by Uganda's fledgling army.

At least 50 people have been killed during each of the past two weeks.

The government has trained 5,600 men to replace Tanzanian troops who remained in the city since the overthrow of Idi Amin one year ago.

Saanich, Esquimalt, Sidney tax up

Saanich property owners will pay slightly more taxes this year, even though the mill rate dropped a little.

Increases also face Esquimalt and Sidney homeowners.

Saanich aldermen ended a month of budget discussions Monday by setting the general purpose mill rate at 48.24 mills, down from 48.31 mills from last year.

A general purpose tax levy of $13.5 million is half the total municipal budget.

The mill rate was kept at last year's level by the addition of a $1.1 million budget surplus, about four mills.

Translated into dollars, the tax increase means owners of a $75,000 home will pay about $75 more in taxes.

And a 9.7-per-cent increase in the assessment roll boosts the value of a mill to $280,488.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said some residents could be facing a 12-to-15-per-cent increase in taxes.

Couvelier blamed higher taxes on inflation, and said taxes must go up even to keep municipal services at the same level.

Assistant municipal treasurer Robert Porter told council the major portion of the increase in the assessment roll is because it's the final year of the three-year phase-in program for assessment increases.

He said two per cent of the new assessment is due to new construction and subdivision development.

Police and public works departments received budget increases of 15 and 9 per cent respectively, boosting their budgets to over $4 million each.

Just over $1 million will be spent this year on social services, an increase of 11 per cent over last year.

Council also agreed to add $200,000 to the contingency reserve fund, bringing the total to $300,000 to cover an expected pay increase for firemen and fringe benefits for the municipal police force.

In Esquimalt, homeowners face an 8.78-per-cent hike in taxes following council's approval Monday night of the new budget.

It calls for a general tax levy of $4,487,942, up from $4,440,142.

The increase means the gross tax bill for an owner of a $60,000 house will be $899 compared to $829 last year.

The total mill rate, including hospital, school and regional tariffs was set at 103.1, representing a 5.5-mill increase. The general tax rate is 51.5 mills.

Mayor Ken Hill said council had held the line on most expenses but had included a three-mill allowance for possible future financing of a proposed separation of police and fire services.

In Sidney, taxpayers face an over-all hike of about three mills.

Aldermen approved a 1980 budget of $4,897,800, up from last year's $4,096,300.

The rate for school and hospital services increased while the rate for municipal, regional district and assessment authority decreased in spite of actual budget increases, council was told.

To illustrate the impact on a homeowner, town clerk Geoff Logan cited a house on a 75-foot lot which in 1979 was assessed at about $59,500. Last year the owner would have owed $939.38 (including the amount covered by the homeowners' grant). This year the owner will pay $995.52.

Last year Sidney's over-all mill rate was 93.154 compared with this year's 96.141.

Builder joins in CRD suit

B.C. Supreme Court Justice J.G. Ruttan Monday allowed developers Cal Investments Ltd. to join Saanich in appealing an injunction obtained by the Capital Region District blocking construction of the Tillieum shopping centre.

The decision puts Cal Investments Ltd. in a position to recover damages if the CRD loses the case.

Ruttan allowed Cal Investments to enter into the action after listening to arguments by lawyers for the developers and Saanich.

Don Farquhar, represented the CRD, opposed the application by the developers to join Saanich in the action.

The appeal resumed today with Cal Investments lawyer Brian Wallace presenting arguments why the injunction should be set aside.

Wallace is asking for an undertaking to have the CRD pay any damages which may be awarded by the court.

Cal Investments and Saanich are also asking the matter be dealt with summarily, allowing for a speedy trial.

The normal court process of examination and cross-examination is too slow, Wallace said Monday.

He said the case must be resolved by the beginning of June because the developer must start construction June 6 to keep Zellers as a tenant.

The entire shopping centre must be finished by June, 1981, to allow tenants the required 20 weeks to install fixtures before the centre opens in November.

If the November deadline is missed, tenants don't legally have to move in until March and developers face $300,000 monthly carrying charges on the empty centre over four months, Wallace told the court.

The CRD was granted a B.C. Supreme Court injunction last Monday preventing Saanich from lifting a restrictive covenant allowing the developers to add 200,000 square feet to plans for a 295,000-square-foot shopping centre design.

The injunction also prevents Saanich from issuing any building permits to Cal Investments.

Ruttan decided changes in the rules since last summer allow a third party with a direct interest in the issue to join a lawsuit.

Last summer he denied a similar application by Cal Investments to join with Saanich in opposing a lawsuit initiated by the regional board over the shopping development.

The city ended the year 1979 with a surplus of $1,027,078, comptroller Mason Sheldrick told city council Monday.

Victoria spent a total of $42,549,419 last year on operating expenditures, according to documents released by the city's budget manager.

Another $2,938,334 on special expenditures — capital projects and public works which Victoria finances out of general revenues — brought total city spending to $45,487,753.

The 1979 surplus was brought forward as a revenue item and included in the 1980 budget.

The final budget estimate for 1980 established by council at its last budget session Monday morning was $56,316,510 for operating and special expenditures combined.

That figure is more than $5 million below the original provisional budget estimate and represents a range of cuts in public works, the fire department, and recreation.

Vancouver night clerk stabbed to death

VANCOUVER (CP) — A night clerk in a west end hotel was been found stabbed to death early today in what police suspect was a robbery attempt.

Donald James Smith, 34, of Vancouver was found in the lobby of the Pacific Pallisades Hotel by a guest who saw a man running from the scene.

Police had not determined whether any money was taken.

McGeer won't help homeless students

Universities Minister Pat McGeer has cold comfort for students facing a severe housing shortage.

"The one thing we have set as policy which we will not change is that educational money should not be used for housing purposes.

"We've got too limited funds in the academic area for it to be taken to subsidize housing," McGeer said Monday.

Delegates to a Victoria meeting of the B.C. Students' Federation said students may be forced to live in motels or even tents this fall because of a shortage of residences or alternative accommodation.

Some students will be forced to leave school entirely, the meeting was told.

McGeer suggested the remedy rests with the university administrations.

"They can set up with any commercial corporation. They can lease part of their land to someone to come in and build their accommodation for them."

If the universities are looking for some sort of government subsidy, he said, they should look to the ministry of housing, not to him.

However, McGeer also said the housing ministry already has more problems than it can handle in the province-wide shortage of rental accommodation.

SAS soldiers drop by rope from embassy roof

Post-mortem: rubble will tell more gory tales

Times News Services

LONDON — Police said today they believe explosives used by army commandos in storming the Iranian embassy set off other devices, possibly booby-traps, planted by terrorists who had killed two of their 21 hostages.

Police said they believe more than five Arab-Iranian gunmen were involved in the six-day siege, but stressed the proof lies in the rubble of the gutted building.

Peter Duffy, head of Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist branch said he believed at least six gunmen were involved in the embassy attack, and other police officials said five gunmen were slain and one was in custody.

"There are at least two bodies still in the embassy," Duffy said, "and I personally believe we may find more."

The black-hooded British army commandos staged their lightning raid Monday evening after the Arab-Iranian gunmen methodicaly executed two of their hostages, and threatened to kill more.

Three hostages were shot and wounded during the the lifting of the siege. The other 16 — including four women — were released unharmed except for minor cuts.

Deputy Assistant Commissioner John Dellow said that soon into the six-day siege, the gunmen dropped demands for the release of 91 ethnic Arabs and wanted only "free exit from the country . . . by aircraft."

Part of the problem in identifying the dead, he explained, was that many of the hostages did not know one another. Besides embassy staff, there were journalists, tourists, a carpet dealer and a bank official among the captives.

Dellow declined to discuss details of the commando attack that ended the siege, but said:

"I would have thought that most of the loud noises and explosions were part of the military attack. With regard to the fire, I'm not so sure that was the case . . . It is likely, I think, that the amount of material left about the terrorists was likely to be something that could start a fire."

Newspaper reports said highly sensitive microphones had been lowered down chimneys of the building to pinpoint the location of the hostages.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher Tuesday praised "the brilliant action by the police and the Special Air Service (SAS)," the crack army regiment which stormed the embassy. She said they acted "with courage and confidence."

Meanwhile, the end of the siege brought praise in Tehran for the embassy staff and the British police.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr Bani-Sadr sent a message to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher thanking the British police for their "intelligent" handling of the siege, and Radio Tehran broadcast a statement in which the Iranian foreign ministry said "the manner and speed of action of the British police in these operations deserves admiration."

The battle ending the six-day standoff at the embassy — televised to millions — started when a black-masked

Did whiz kid crack code?

NEW YORK (AP) — The FBI is seeking a possible "little Einstein" who may have used a classroom computer at one of New York City's most exclusive private schools to penetrate 21 Canadian computer systems.

"Some people here were outraged that it could happen," said a Dalton School teacher who asked not to be named. "But some find it sort of funny — I mean, what do you do to an 8th grader who's smart enough to figure out something like this?"

"At this point we don't know who we suspect or what the motive may have been," Federal Bureau of Investigation spokesman Quentin Ertel said Tuesday. "Our investigation is not complete by any means."

The FBI knows this much: Someone apparently found a way to tap into the link between two communications networks — GTE Telenet Communications Corp., of Vienna, Va., and Bell Canada's Datapac — and used it to gain access to computer systems operated by 21 Canadian firms and universities.

The FBI is still investigating why the computers were tapped, Ertel said. At least one company said many of its computer files were destroyed.

The FBI said New York Telephone Co. investigators traced the computer invader to several telephone numbers at the Dalton school.

"We don't know whether it was a little Einstein or a frustrated professor," one source told reporters.

Dalton is a private school located in Manhattan's exclusive Upper East Side. Helga Gould, an aide to the headmaster, said 1,224 students ranging from age 3 to 18 are enrolled. The school employs 180 teachers, administrators and clerks.

Four terminals are used in classes on computer technology.

Successfully tapping into the Datapac-Telenet link may require the address of the computer to be tapped, identification codes and, sometimes, passwords, said Telenet spokesman Carolyn Morse.

"It's hard to tell how sophisticated they were because we don't know yet what they did," she added.

Among the Canadian systems violated, according to the FBI affadavit, were Bell Canada, Scott Hart Associates, Cable Share Inc., and the universities of Toronto, Waterloo and Alberta.

World's worst airport?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver International Airport was branded Monday as one of the world's worst-run airports where passengers are subject to insults and humiliation and often left out in the rain by uncaring taxi drivers.

The criticism was levelled by a battery of witnesses testifying at an inquiry conducted by the B.C. Motor Carrier Commission under the chairmanship of Judge G. Ross Sutherland.

Specific allegations are that MacLure's Cabs Ltd., as a duly licensed passenger carrier, has failed to provide adequate and responsible taxi service to the public from the airport to points such as Richmond, Surrey and south Vancouver.

Several witnesses claimed they had been refused rides from the airport by MacLure's cab drivers, who were seeking longer, more lucrative runs to downtown Vancouver.

"As a Canadian, I am ashamed of the service at Vancouver International Airport," testified mining geologist Albert Thomas Lonergan of Vancouver. "Vancouver has the poorest (service) I've encountered and I blame management and bureaucratic stonewalling."

Lonergan said he came off an international flight from South Africa in 1977 and was refused a cab ride from a MacLure driver after being told where he wanted to go.

Anita Brown, a medical laboratory technician, testified she was the victim of a chaotic situation on New Year's Eve, 1979.

She said she was refused by three different MacLure's drivers when she informed them she was not going to downtown Vancouver.

Finally, she said, she found an RCMP constable in the airport and it was only when he intervened and put a halt to drivers selecting their own customers and leaving others that some order was restored.

Lawyer Paul Sabatino related an experience when he arrived on a night flight from Toronto on Dec. 2 last year and found an elderly Chinese woman reduced to tears because cab drivers would not pick her up. He said he did not get home until midnight and that he found the cab company had treated his complaint with indifference.

Robert Warren Taylor, chief licence inspector for the municipality of Richmond, told the inquiry: "This has got to be one of the most inefficient taxi services anywhere."

Elated Trident now planning 500-job future

By AL FORREST

Trident Aircraft Ltd. is back in business and the company expects to be twice as big as orginally planned.

Chief executive officer Jerry Vaverek today announced Trident will hire 500 employees by mid-1983, instead of its original target of about 250.

Research by the company during its waiting period has shown the demand for Trident products is much stronger than originally anticipated, he said.

Vaverek was commenting on an announcement Monday by Ed Lumley, federal minister of state for trade, that Ottawa will honor its promise of a $2 million loan plus $2 million in loan guarantees.

Lumley said: "This will allow the company to continue operations while it seeks additional funds from the private sector and carries out any changes in its operations which may be necessary for that purpose."

Trident hired 112 people in 1979 on the basis of a federal government announcement of the loan, but had to lay off 107 of them when the Liberal government fell and the Conservative government announced the loan had been cancelled.

Vaverek said he expects only 30 or 40 of the 107 employees will be hired back because the others have found other jobs and have moved away.

"We will find good people, I'm sure of that, but they will be new people."

The long-term plan is to produce 12 amphibian Trigull planes per month.

The original target was for a maximum of 10 per month.

When funds are received, the company will hire and train about 120 employees for the first 12-month period to produce the first plane for sale.

After that the pace will gradually increase until peak production of 12

Metchosin youth dies in crash

An 18-year-old Metchosin youth was killed Monday night in a two-car collision in the 3400-block Happy Valley Road.

Colwood RCMP said Calvin McKay Marshall died instantly in the crash about 7:30 p.m.

Marshall was a passenger in a car driven by Roger Raymond Praud, 18, of 595 Latoria.

A police spokesman said Praud was turning left into a parking lot beside Happy Valley store when his vehicle was in collision with a car driven by Stewart Rickie Gordon, 19, of 7155 Brentwood Drive.

The band blew it welcoming Ohira

OTTAWA (CP) — If Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira was offended, he didn't let on, but red-faced Canadian officials are still trying to figure out how the armed forces marching band committed such a gaffe.

Marching to Parliament Hill for ceremonies opening the prime minister's three-day visit to Canada, the band belted out The Colonel Bogey March — more familiar as the song whistled by British prisoners of war in the movie Bridge Over the River Kwai.

External affairs made sure the band knew the Japanese national anthem, but no one checked the rest of the program.

"We are extremely embarrassed," an armed forces spokesman said.

"In the long, meticulous planning for this visit, this particular portion slipped by," he said.

Reservations on Seattle ferry

By JAKE BANKY

A spokesman in Transport Minister Alex Fraser's office confirmed today that a reservation system — similar to that offered by airlines — will also be used on the ferry service between Victoria and Seattle.

And just like air travel, passengers will pay for their reserved tickets in advance.

It was announced earlier that reservations would be required on the jetfoil.

Vancouver East NDP MLA Alex Macdonald claimed Monday that travellers will have to make the reservations a week in advance.

The spokesman said this will not be necessary during the spring and fall months.

But he agreed that during the peak summmer season it probably would be a good idea to reserve about a week in advance.

Macdonald claimed the arrangements call for seven days advance notice of reservations for either the jetfoil or the Victoria Princess and the reservations must be made through travel agencies.

"In fact those who will get the reservations are people on package tours," Macdonald said.

"It's good for the tour people and it's good for the travel agents but it's not very good for the people of Victoria or the tourists — the ordinary people who want to travel."

However the spokesman in Fraser's office said the system means travellers will be able to ensure they can get aboard when they want and will no longer have to line up hours in advance.

The spokesman said the new system will be a great improvement.

"Travellers will be able to decide which sailings they wish to travel on and be able to find out right there and then at the travel agent's office if in fact seating is available."

The spokesman said passengers do not have to reserve — they can take their chances and buy tickets at the dock as they have done in the past.

However, few tickets will be available if the system works as expected.

By PAT DUFOUR

Seven members of the University of Victoria Railway Club are back from Kelowna after a 58-mile trek along the abandoned Canadian Pacific Railway line between McCulloch Lake and Penticton.

The adventure was sparked by an article in the Dec. 15 Times' Weekend Magazine (now called Today) which described the efforts of the Kettle Valley Railway Heritage Society to save the abandoned track of the old Kettle Valley line. The group thinks the line has potential as a tourist attraction.

Caleb Small, president of the UVic club, contacted members of the society mentioned in the article and the 40 members of Small's club decided to throw their weight behind the efforts to save what is left of the line. The railway was completed in 1915.

Small and vice-president Michael Batten report that 100 miles of the track have already been ripped up but the KVRHS is getting a lot of support from the community to save the rest. The two groups' recent sortie along the remaining track, apart from the adventure, was to rally more support.

The Victoria contingent took along the speeder which took members 2½ years to complete. Leading the parade on the tracks was a Toyota land cruiser, carrying camping gear, food and other equipment.

Also in the nostalgic parade were two velocipedes (a one-man railway vehicle commonly used until recent years to service remote sections of track).

The other Victorians in the group were Peter Barlow, Alain Hargreaves, Paul Hearsey, Rod Glover and Jane Eert.

Small and Batten said in an interview they found the line in good shape.

"I was really impresssed with the track and condition of it. And the trestles are all in excellent condition," Small said.

Batten said there's an urgent need for action with 100 miles of good track already gone. He said the remainder of the track was brought up to scratch for the CBC's filming of The National Dream.

"What a feat it must have been to build the line in the first place, literally on the mountainside. It's quite an insult to the men who built it to tear it up."

There are 18 trestles on the route and four tunnels. In one of the tunnels the voyagers had to chip away a large block of ice to get through. When they reached the end of the tunnel they found a rock slide had to be cleared.

Because it is built much higher than the highways, Small and Batten said the scenery is breath-taking. At one point they met a man driving his van along the track enjoying the surroundings.

"He was driving the van right down the rails," Small said.

Support from residents along the way added to the enjoyment of the trip. At one stop the Chute Valley Lodge owners provided, free, a fine dinner and breakfast and room to camp overnight.

Having met and helped their Mainland counterparts, the UVic club has received some help in return. While the club's first speeder was built laboriously from scratch, the club has been given parts that will allow them to quickly assemble another.

They also have promises of support in their campaign to save some of the abandoned Canadian National Railway track on Vancouver Island.

"It's so easy to break it up (track) for scrap but think of all the engineering that went into some of these lines," Small said.

TOWN TALK

We've heard of ice carvings and molded chocolate statuettes but one restaurant's weekend advertisement for a roast beef dinner marks a culinary advance of major proportions.

The Waddling Dog Inn on the Pat Bay Highway advertised in Saturday's Times a $7.95 Sunday buffet from noon to 3 p.m.

"We will be carving a hip of beef to your likeness," said the ad.

It might start a whole new dining experience — prime rib famous faces, pork chops that look like Grandma used to. Big Macs that look like Ronald McDonald.

Will that be silhouette or three-quarter profile, sir? A little less on the nose please, waiter.

Those folks over at Gulf Islands Secondary School are fond of slipping zingers into the classified columns of the Gulf Islands Driftwood.

Town Talk reported Friday the students had sold the school through a cleverly-worded ad describing the hilltop building as a 10-bedroom home with several bathrooms, workshops, playrooms and large open areas.

The asking price was $198,000 or best offer and rumor had it the teachers snapped it up for $1.98. At the same time they apparently placed their own sneaky ad in the paper.

"HELP, Moving to Colombia. Must find good homes for 55 adorable, loving children before June 21. All are house-trained, shots given; some on medication. June 22 — giant rummage sale of 55 containers; rare treasures such as mouldy lunches, fascinating pictures, sports equipment, odd socks, rare books, broken lids, insect collections. Any offers accepted. 537-2213."

That's one way to clear out 55 lockers. Phew.

That expensive monument fo federal budget restraint — the vacant CBC building on Blanshard — is proving a magnet to young people, some of whom exhibit pronounced vandalistic tendencies.

Monday night police were up and down ladders at the building trying to nail some youthful trespassers and a week ago, about a dozen youngsters were seen scampering up and down the the structure and frolicking on the roof.

Some of the building's large windows have been shattered and one onlooker predicts it's only a matter of time before somebody gets hurt in a fall.

$3.6M Camsell job awarded to Yarrows

By PAT DUFOUR

The Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Camsell was towed by a Seaspan tug into Yarrows shipyard on Monday for a $3.6-million repair and refit job.

General manager Don Challinor said the year-long Camsell project will enable the yard to "continue the rather high level of employment — nearly 800 jobs."

H.O. Buchanan of Vancouver, the ministry of transport's regional director of marine services, said the final cost of readying the Camsell for a return to duty will be about $5 million with the department doing some of the work itself.

He said it has taken 18 months of negotiations with Ottawa to get the green light on the project.

The icebreaker received two gashes when she struck ice in Queen Maude Gulf, east of Cambridge Bay on Sept. 10, 1978. Her engine room flooded and the ship sank so low in the water that her deck was awash.

Yarrows has subcontracted to Westinghouse for the electrical equipment portion of the project. Westinghouse conducted a $50,000 study to determine the cost of repairs in 1979.

Challinor said the project will take a year because the electrical equipment will have to be taken out and rebuilt.

In addition to the repairs, the accommodation for officers aboard the Camsell will be upgraded. The men's quarters were modernized before the Arctic mishap.

A sewage holding tank will also be installed. Challinor said this should cost less than $100,000.

Normally, the Camsell would be leaving for her Western Arctic run in early July.

This year, MoT's district manager Larry Slaght said the Quebec City-based icebreaker J.E. Bernier will come to the West Coast via the Panama Canal to replace the Camsell in the Western Arctic. The J.E. Bernier will arrive in Victoria shortly before having to leave for the Western Arctic.

Since Camsell was knocked out of action, the Narwhal has been used to carry out buoy-tending and other duties on this coast that are normally done by Camsell.

Slaght said he hopes to retain the Narwhal until after Camsell returns from her Arctic tour of duty in October 1981.

400 needed for MS drive

The Victoria and Vancouver Island Multiple Sclerosis Society needs about 400 volunteers Friday and Saturday to help in the Carnation Day campaign to raise $25,000.

The volunteers will work at shopping centres and downtown.

Anyone interested should contact the local office at 388-6496.

The national Carnation Day goal this year is to raise $1 million to be used to support the society's research and patient services programs.

More than 35,000 Canadians have MS, a chronic, crippling disease which most often hits people between 20 and 40.

Elworthy to sue BCSC for wrongful dismissal

Arthur Elworthy said Monday he will bring suit against B.C. Steamship Corp. for wrongful dismissal.

Elworthy lost his job as president and general manager of the Crown corporation in a fight over the Princess Marguerite.

He said he received a letter last week from David Price, the new acting general manager, informing him that as of April 30 his medical and dental plan membership and his group life insurance plan benefits will cease.

Although it was widely reported in March that the government fired Elworthy, he told the Times that except for the Price letter he has had no official word on his status and had remained at his post.

"That's the only notification I've ever had," he said, referring to Price's letter.

"Nobody in the government has talked to me."

He said apart from a statement by Industry Minister Don Phillips March 11 at a B.C. Steamship board meeting that the government had lost confidence in him, there has been no communication.

At that meeting Elworthy was not re-elected to the board of directors of the company, and it was stated by Transport Minister Alex Fraser that he was the new president and Price, the Seattle agent for the company whom Elworthy hired, was the acting GM.

"Nobody has had the guts to stand up and talk to me," he said.

"I don't know if it's stopped or not," Elworthy said in reference to his pay.

He said he worked half of April at B.C. Steamship.

Elworthy, 58, served as president and general manager of the B.C. government agency from 1976.

"The government asked me to take it on and try to do something."

Elworthy said he thinks he did a good job, taking the fledlging company from a loss of more than $1 million that year to a profit of several hundred thousand dollars in 1979.

Elworthy clashed with the government on the matter of a replacement vessel for the Marguerite.

He wanted the larger Queen of Surrey to replace the 32-year-old steamship, then reverted to the Marguerite (which he had condemned earlier as unsafe) when the government gave him the smaller, slower Queen of Prince Rupert (now the Victoria Princess) instead.

Before taking on the B.C. Steamship presidency, he spent his working life in the towboat business.

Newsmen spook businessmen

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A presentation to city council of a major downtown development proposal was cancelled today because there were too many prying reporters present.

Downtown businessmen Philip Holmes and Tom Denny came prepared with a slide show on their concept for redeveloping two square blocks in the heart of Victoria, but shied away from publicity at the last moment.

Their pitch was scheduled for the informal committee of the whole council, a meeting which is open to the public and press but is not advertised in advance. Sometimes it is attended only by council members.

But with half a dozen newsmen there who had heard rumors of something big in the works for the blocks bounded by Douglas, Yates, Government and Johnson, the proponents and their council sponsor, Ald. Ron McKenzie, cancelled out.

McKenzie came over to the press table where the slide projector was set up and pocketed about a dozen slides which were ready for showing. He refused to give any information on the proposal, but reporters got a bare outline from Mayor Bill Tindall and other sources.

Holmes and Denny left city hall and could not be contacted later for comment.

Apparently, it involves a scheme similar to the redevelopment that changed the face of downtown Vancouver, the Bronfmans' project that put up highrise office towers and hotel space and underground shopping malls at Georgia and Granville.

The Denny-Holmes plan is reported to combine a hotel with retail and office space, plus a transportation terminal on the two blocks in downtown Victoria.

One facet of the plan is believed to involve bringing in the E & N Railway by tunnel under Market Square, and possibly to provide terminal space for buses as well.

"I can't comment on it because it involves land acquisition," was all McKenzie would say when contacted by reporters after.

He said any publicity now would be premature as "the thing is not put together. The whole thing is very speculative at the moment."

Mayor Bill Tindall said he told Holmes and Denny, both key figures in the downtown business establishment, that they could take their chances on the morning caucus being ignored by the press.

He suggested once their cover was blown that the proper route would be to present the plan to the Advisory Planning Commission study session, which are always held behind closed doors.

McKenzie confirmed this was the next step he and the backers would now take.

Imperial Oil backs the opera

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. has announced it will be the principal supporter of the Canadian Opera Company Ensemble, a permanent resident company of eight Canadian singers and one conductor.

Imperial's founding grant of $164,000 for four years will allow the company to form a full-time year-round professional corps for the first time.

Lotfi Mansouri, general director of the opera company, said world class singers born in Canada must go to Europe for their apprenticeship.

The Canadian Opera Company has been unable to offer full-time employment to singers and, he said, most are hired for 18 weeks a year. The resident ensemble is a first step toward changing the employment picture for singers.

Buffalo diorama, Manitoba Museum of Man and Nature, Winnipeg — open daily.

Surprise! These buffalo are frozen in mid-charge in Winnipeg's Museum of Man and Nature — a treat for you and your camera. Stroll the streets of Winnipeg as it was in 1920. Find out more about the past and present of the people who live where the Old West began.

Stand on the site of the Battle of Seven Oaks, where some of the original Selkirk Settlers were slain. Take a walking tour of Winnipeg, learn the story of our famous Golden Boy. Drive just out of Winnipeg to see St. Andrew's — with its buffalo hide kneeling benches, it's the oldest stone church in western Canada in continuous use.

Remember, you're in festival country and Manitoba's summer festivals are something to celebrate. You'll find fun festivals all over Manitoba and you're always welcome to share the good times. Sample life on a working farm when you spend a few days on a farm vacation.

Head out east and see our beautiful lake and forest country. Camp out. Stay in cabins or lakeside resorts. Hike, swim, fish, explore a waterway tunnel, visit a goose sanctuary. It's all yours this summer in historic, friendly, Manitoba.

Containers tell a story

By KEN RICHARDSON

The Victorians used boxes for everything and many of the colorful specimens around today are from that dynamic era. Connoisseurs tend to favor the porcelain kind, handpainted or transfer printed with charming scenes. There is also a widespread interest in containers covered with the finest fabrics and designed to hold handkerchiefs, colars and gloves. Boxes were also made for hair grease, potted fish and even medicinal ointments; it is from this kind of packaging that another extremely popular collectable derives — pot lids; notably those put out by the English company named Pratt. Many of the boxes were quite plain or could bear the name and address of individual pharmacists; while the latter lacked embellishments they do tell a graphic story and reveal an interesting sidelight on the social history of the period. In England, whole industries owed their very existence and prosperity to the consuming fad for boxes. The famous enamels of Bilston and Battersea, marvels of artistic precision, offer fine examples of the work — not only in the usual round, oblong or square shapes but also in models of animals or birds. Tunbridge ware achieved fame because of the intricacy of the craftsmanship employed in the manufacture of boxes.

Flea markets, yes. Collector-dealers are often extremely knowledgeable and very helpful to new collectors. Auctions are another good source but check pre-lists carefully so you know what you are about.

Some of the items may be in mint condition, especially those made of paper, fabric or embroidery. Lots of other have survived reasonably well. Check for authenticity and insist on a full description on your bill of sale.

Princes range from $5 to $500. A Tunbridge ware box with fitted interior, circa 1860 is worth about $45; a Victorian footed ring box decorated with a mandolin, horn and music box $25; an oval Bride's Box decorated with a painted man and woman, $245.

Q. I have a photograph that resembles your description of a daguerrotype but the detail is quite faded. Can you comment? R.W.

A. Only one answer: it was exposed to excessive light for an extended period. A tragedy, really, since it has happened to so many otherwise sound specimens of the important collectable.

Q. Your evaluation of $175 on my early Edison phonograph seems on the short side. Would you revise? T.B.

A. The estimate I gave is approximately right as a calculated average.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was down sharply in moderately active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said trading in shares of Atco Ltd. was halted at the opening pending an announcement. The stock last traded at $19¾.

Trading in shares of General Motors Corp., which was halted during the morning, was down 3¼ to $50¼ by 1 p.m.

The company announced it has reduced its quarterly dividend to 60 cents a share from $1.15 a share.

The Ontario Securities Commission said that at the request of the company, it has issued a cease-trading order in two series of IU International Corp. preferred shares.

The order is for 15 days unless otherwise rescinded or revised, the commission said.

IU International stock was halted on the Toronto Stock Exchange on Monday and last traded at $15⅞.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A dropped 5 to $91, Hudson's Bay Oil and Gas 2 to $28¾, Husky Oil 2 to $95, Cominco 1½ to $53½ and Seagram Co. ⅞ to $63⅜.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in active trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Of stocks traded, 96 advanced, 118 declined and 190 were unchanged.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, dropping .05 to $6.35 on 24,389 shares and Great West Steel was unchanged at $2.90 on 4,500. Daon Development was steady at $5⅝ on 1,200 and Potter Distillers-B was unchanged at $2 on 1,000. Renn Industries dropped .10 to $1.50 and Computrex Centres was steady at .20.

On the resource and development board, Giant Explorations gained .12 to .75 on 55,861 shares and Seaforth Mines advanced .10 to $2.70 on 40,600. Laredo Petroleum rose .09 to $2.04 on 35,000 and Imperial Metals gained .10 to $1.15 on 31,300. Charleston Warrants gained .02 to .12 and Anglo-Bomarc Mines advanced .05 to $3.00.

Stateside Energy led traders on the curb exchange, remaining unchanged at $1.15 on 231,500 shares and Chopper Mines was steady at .92 on 61,100. Eldorado Minerals gained .01 to $1.06 on 27,100 and Goldstack Resources gained .05 to $1.15 on 20,100. Westward Energy advanced .20 to $3.85 and Eaton Mining rose .10 to $1.35.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — General Motors shares sold off sharply, but the rest of the stock market pushed ahead in moderate trading.

GM shares led the active list, off 2⅜ to $42¼, following the company's declaration late Monday of a 60-cent-a-share second quarter dividend.

That marked a 63.6-per-cent decline from the $1.65 payout in May of last year. The company also said it was not sure it would show a profit for the current quarter.

Elsewhere, the bank prime lending rate continued its erratic decline of late in the wake of the steep slide in open-market interest rates.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market moved higher at the close of trading.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrials closed at 444.9, up 1.3.

Industrials were mixed and golds firmed.

Canadian stocks were mixed.
